Winning Lottery Numbers Announced

ALBANY (UPI) — State Lottery officials Friday completed the second of five weekly drawings of winning numbers in the Holiday and Colossal Payback Game, which carries an eventual top prize of $980,000.

The four winning three-digit numbers were 706, 502, 078, 842. The winning six-digit number was 233313.

Persons holding weekly Holiday Special lottery tickets which contain one of the three-digit winning numbers win $20, while tickets in which both three-digit numbers match winning combinations are good for $3,000.

If a ticket's single six-digit number matches the winning selection, it entitles the holder to a minimum of $5,000 and a crack during a later drawing at the $980,000 grand prize.

Families Homeless From N.Y. Blaze

NEW YORK (UPI) — One person was killed, 12 people were injured and 96 families were left homeless in a pair of multiple-alarm apartment house fires which broke out almost simultaneously in upper Manhattan Saturday night.

Authorities did not immediately disclose the identity of the victim who perished in a four-alarm blaze which started at 6:06 p.m. in a five-story building in Harlem.

Ruling Party Has Trouble in Japan

TOKYO (UPI) — Voters went to polling stations across Japan Sunday to vote in a general election that could cost the scandal-tainted, pro-American ruling party its parliamentary majority for the first time in decades.

Leaders of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party, enmeshed in the $12 million Lockheed payoff scandal, and the opposition parties alike were uncertain about their strength.

Gilmore, Prosecutors Now on Same Side

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Killer Gary Gilmore, who wants to be executed, and the State of Utah, which wants to kill him by firing squad, wound up Saturday on the same side of a legal battle in the U.S. Supreme Court.

"I don't think there's ever been a case where the state and the defendant in a capital crime were basically on the same side against the ruling of the Supreme Court granting the stay," said Gilmore's attorney Ron Stanger Saturday.

Rep. Bergland May Be Ag Secretary

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Bob Bergland, a Minnesota Democrat close to Vice President-elect Walter F. Mondale, is high on the list of potential choices for Secretary of Agriculture, informed sources said Saturday.

The sources, disclaiming knowledge that President-elect Jimmy Carter had made a final decision, said at least two or three others also were believed still to be in the running for the cabinet position.

They said, however, Bergland was "very, very high" on Carter's list.

Judge Holds Ruling On Reading of Names

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA
Freeman staff

KINGSTON — Judge Robert Williams reserved decision in the case involving Town of Saugerties Supervisor Frank Greco and the public reading of names of local welfare recipients at a special term of Ulster County Supreme Court Friday afternoon.

The judge set Tuesday as the date for final submission of briefs in the case and extended the preliminary restraining order that prohibits Greco from revealing names, addresses, and amounts received by those on the home relief rolls in Saugerties.

Greco was barred from reading the names at a Town Board meeting in early November by an injunction on behalf of two unnamed Saugerties welfare recipients. The injunction was obtained by Bryan Hetherington, managing attorney at the Kingston office of the Mid-Hudson Valley Legal Services project.

Hetherington argued Friday that Greco's original announcement to the press that he would read the names had "created a carnival atmosphere" which attracted a crowd beyond the capacity of the Town Hall to handle.

He insisted the law "has always protected the confidentiality" of welfare recipients and their "right of personal privacy."

Said Hetherington, "To release their names would embarrass recipients and cause people who were eligible for public assistance not to apply because their names would be released."

He maintained "severe embarrassment" would result to many on the Saugerties rolls, since many constituted local families of some 40 years of residency. And while he agreed that board members themselves were entitled to know the names, he charged that Greco was attempting "to walk through a loophole in the law to release the names to the public."

The attorney general, he said, has long held that such disclosure would be improper to taxpayers or citizens groups.

"This should not be done at a public meeting," he said, "but only at a town board meeting, and only to authorized town officers—and the public is not in that category."

Nothing prohibited Greco, he said, from reading the names to the board, or passing them out in written form to the board members.

"But the press should not have the information, and the public should not," (See GRECO, page 5)

Rare Ceremony at Institution

Four Wed in Jail

By CHAZY DOWALIBY
Freeman staff

KINGSTON — Sub-freezing winds and snowy skies melted away at the door of the Ulster County Jail Saturday night in the wedding-vow warmth of a rare double marriage ceremony in the visitors' room of the Golden Hill institution.

Jail chaplain Rev. George Baker pronounced two couples man and wife in a brief, traditional ceremony in a very untraditional setting Saturday 8:30 p.m.

Elinor Bontell and Moody LaFoy Snider Jr., both inmates at the jail, exchanged nuptial promises along with inmate Andre Chino Sanchez and his new wife, Margaret Merrero.

Prison officials were reticent to release too much information on what they considered a private matter between the couples, but Corporal Kevin Castiglione did say that jailings are rare — coming only about one or two times a year.

Two fellow inmates served as maid of honor and best man for the Snider couple. Sanchez' brother and Mrs. Sanchez sister stood up for them.

Castiglione noted that the two couples had not requested a dual ceremony. "They just put in for permission to get married at the same time, so we scheduled them together," he said.

Snider, a 22-year-old window washer from Bethpage, L.I. is in the facility awaiting a court decision on charges that he raped an 18-year-old New Paltz coed in October.

The new Mrs. Snider, 31, is at the jail pending a court appearance on charges of check forgery.

Cpl. Castiglione said he didn't know how the couple met, or if they had known each other before their incarceration.

"The only place men and women inmates can meet in the jail is during day high school or college classes," he explained.

The charges against Sanchez, a 29-year-old New Paltz resident, were not available Saturday night. Mrs. Sanchez lives in Kingston.

The two couples had to do without the traditional champagne toast and formal reception after their "I dos."

They were allowed a half-hour private visit before returning to their cells.

Asked if he had attended the special ceremony last night Corp. Castiglione very quietly said, "No, I don't like weddings."

State Team to Probe Charges

Russell Case Rescheduled

NEW PALTZ — The case against a New Paltz Central School District teacher charged with assaulting students in his gym class has been postponed again.

William Russell, accused by parents of three Duane Elementary School children of third degree assault, appeared Friday night before Town Justice Rexford Schneider and had his case rescheduled to Dec. 17.

Russell's lawyer, Alfred Hafke, made the request on the grounds that he had just been appointed to the case and was not prepared to argue in behalf of his client at that time.

The attorney for the parents, Jenny Levinson, said Saturday that the postponement was "the best thing that could have happened."

Ms. Levinson said she had contacted the state child abuse officials, who had agreed to send an investigator into the school Monday to look into the charges.

"I think it's better that we see just what the investigation determines before any definite action is taken in the case," she said.

The charges against Russell stem from an alleged incident during the week of Nov. 8 in which several youngsters were injured during a gym class.

Russell was suspended for several days, with pay, by the New Paltz school superintendent, but subsequently went back to work.

Criminal charges were filed against Russell by three parents of students on Nov. 9. He appeared before Schneider on Nov. 12 and had his case rescheduled for last Friday.

In addition to requesting the child abuse investigation, Ms. Levinson says she plans to contact the federal and state commissioners of education and request that they withhold further grants of Title

I Aid to Education money to the New Paltz system until the Russell case is resolved.

"I think it's time to do a little house cleaning and get things in order," she said.

In addition to parents of the children allegedly injured by Russell a number of other concerned parents of school-aged children also appeared at Friday night's short hearing to express their support of the action and their interest in the resolution of the case.

An organization called the New Paltz Parents for Improved Schools has expressed continued interest in the case and had representatives on hand at the evening court session.

The New Paltz Board of Education is also conducting its own investigation of the incident and its members are withholding comment on the case until their findings are complete.

Herman Rafalowsky Is Dead at 82

KINGSTON — Well-known businessman and community leader Herman G. Rafalowsky died Friday night in the Kingston Hospital after a short illness.

The 82-year-old clothier had been a Kingston resident since 1914, a year after he emigrated from his native Russia.

For many years Mr. Rafalowsky had been the proprietor of one of the city's most notable men's shops, H.G. Rafalowsky Inc., 71 Albany Ave., and had been extremely active in civic and religious affairs.

In 1935 he assumed the presidency of Congregation Ahavath Israel and a year later initiated that group's annual Thanksgiving Ball which served as a fund-raising event, eventually paying for the congregation's first full-time rabbi, and contributing to many of Kingston's non-sectarian charities.

Last month he was honored at the 40th Annual Thanksgiving Ball for his outstanding contributions to his synagogue and the community.

Mr. Rafalowsky was an active member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Central Businessmen's Association and was chairman of the Boost Broadway campaign. He had served as co-chairman of the Benedictine Hospital Drive, which raised money for the Cardinal Spellman Pavilion, and also acted as chairman of the Franklin Street AME Zion Church fund-raising drive.

For two consecutive years he served as county chairman for the annual American Cancer Society drive and was active for many years on the local board of that organization. In addition, he participated in United Way campaigns and telethons.

In 1968 Mr. Rafalowsky was named Kiwanis Man of the Year. For 15 years he co-chaired the local Israel Bond drive and served for a number of years as the spearhead of the local United Jewish Appeal campaign. In 1949 and 1951 the Jewish Theological Seminary recognized his efforts on behalf of the Eternal Light radio and television programs.

He had been instrumental in the establishment of the Ulster County Tumor Clinic, was a member of American Legion Post 150, Zephaniah Lodge of B'nai B'rith, Zionist Organization of America and BPO Elks 550.

Mr. Rafalowsky is survived by his wife, Minna Kinberg Rafalowsky; two sons: Sidney and Norman Rafalowsky; a daughter, Mrs. Sanford (Florence) Gosset; and three grandchildren, all of Kingston.

Funeral services will be held today at noon at Congregation Ahavath Israel, 100 Lucas Ave., Kingston. Burial will be at Montepose Cemetery.

Extortionist, Age 13, Arrested

ROSENDALE — The note read: "Put $50 in your mailbox by Dec. 3 or you will die."

When an elderly Rosendale woman received the threatening extortion message, which was made of letters of the alphabet cut from newspapers and magazines, she called the police.

Intensive investigation by Rosendale Town Police and Kingston State Police BCI and a 12-hour surveillance of the woman's house and mailbox led to the arrest Friday afternoon of a 13-year-old Rosendale youth.

The boy was charged with grand larceny in the first degree, a felony, and was arraigned before Rosendale Justice Albert Morelli who petitioned him to Family Court.

The names of the woman and the youth were withheld.

Grieving Community Buries The Avery Family

KINGSTON — James J. Avery Sr., his two sons on one side and his three daughters on the other were laid to rest in St. Mary's Cemetery Friday. His shivering wife, sole survivor of the area's most tragic fire, collapsed after the service.

The bodies were brought to the cemetery by a six-hearse procession so large that the funeral mass had to be held at St. Peter's Church in Kingston rather than at the Church of the Presentation in Esopus, the family's home church.

In his eulogy over the six Avery coffins surrounding the altar, Msgr. Francis P. Brennan drew a parallel between Mrs. Linda Avery, 25, and the Virgin Mary, who lost her husband and only offspring.

"As Mary, she too has faith to know that this occasion isn't the end of all things... but the beginning of all things."

Street in Connelly early Wednesday.

Pale with grief, Mrs. Avery was helped through the services by her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Avery Sr. of Connelly; her mother, Celia Adams of Port Ewen, and brother-in-law Edward Avery of Connelly.

At the Jensen & Deegan Funeral Home, as the two visitors rooms were emptying for the church services, Mrs. Avery fell weeping with her arms and forehead over her husband's coffin as she said her final prayers to him.

Her mother-in-law, clutching a handkerchief, coaxed Mrs. Avery from the room because "Jimmy would have wanted you to go on."

At the cemetery, bareheaded in the frigid sunlight with only a thin tan coat covering her maroon dress, Mrs. Avery crumbled again after Msgr. Brennan in his burial rites read off the names of the deceased: James Sr., 31; James Jr., 12; Joanne, 11; Edward, 10; Thelma, 8, and Julie, 5.

According to Mrs. Avery's wish, her husband was buried with the boys on

Aspirins, Whiskey Help Colds

LONDON (UPI) — Aspirins and an occasional shot of whisky are superior to doses of vitamin C in curing the common cold, according to a six-month research project by the British Medical Research Council.

"We're still analyzing the final results but there seems to be no evidence that vitamin C helps you get over a cold," said Dr. Tom Meade, a member of the council. "When I get a cold I take a couple of aspirins if I have a headache and I take the odd whisky in the evening. That's my way of coping."

"We now think that even when taken in these large doses, vitamin C seems to have no effect on cold symptoms," Meade said.

At Least One Owl Is Stupid

ONEONTA (UPI) — The culprit was an owl, according to the New York State Electric and Gas Corp.

When power to 5,000 customers in this Otsego County city was interrupted early Thursday for more than an hour, the power company said the foul-up was caused by a not-so-wise owl.

According to the company, when the owl landed on a substation, its wings grounded electrical wires, tripping a circuit breaker and causing the outage.

The electric shock killed the owl along with a rabbit it had in its claws, the company added.

The blackout lasted from 6:15 a.m. to 7:25 a.m.

Saugerties Mills Seen As Historic Treasure

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA
Freeman staff

SAUGERTIES — There is strong feeling in at least one state agency that in the old mills along the Esopus Creek in Saugerties, there is a potential for a National Registry historic designation.

Specialists in salvaging landmarks and in industrial technological assistance with the Historic Preservation Division of the Parks and Recreation Office In Albany say the mills represent some of the Hudson Valley's most imposing and historic — and most important — industrial structures.

"This is where the America we know today began," they say. "You could write the whole history of architecture and technology of the 19th century right here."

Larry Gobrecht and Ray Smith, of the State Preservation Division, have conducted a walking survey of the mills, but have done no research to date. Still, they feel the mill buildings that line the banks of the Esopus before it enters the Hudson are important "architectural survivals." And not only are the old, interesting buildings rarities in themselves, they say, but so is the power system at the site that has defied time.

The large water supply system that comes off the top of the mill pond where the bridge crosses from the main road intrigues them. Still intact in 1976, it supplied power to the mills off to the south side of the creek in the long, long ago. The survival of the original system, they say, is as impressive as the 19th century mills, some of which incorporated older, 18th century foundations in their building.

Gobrecht and Smith have urged a professional survey in the mill area to identify what has survived, and to analyze whether restoration for adaptive re-use is possible and worthwhile. They say the project should be done soon, and that it would have to be undertaken by the local community. The state could provide professional guidelines to such a survey team, they note, and furnish support with photography, the kinds of data needed for the National Registry, and visiting scholars and specialists.

The basic legwork, however, would have to be done locally, they emphasized. The only Saugerties group that could become involved in such a survey is the local Arts Council. Members of that organization are aware of the enthusiasm of the State Preservation Division men for the project, but have taken no action on the matter.

Many Saugerties residents, in fact, remain unconvinced that putting the mills back in operation for other business uses would benefit the community.

They see them only as unsalvageable ruins that will some day have to fall to the wreckers ball. To most of them, Mills spell work, dirt and drudgery. Eager to preserve a house, church or grist mill of colonial times, they have no nostalgia for their industrial heritage or its mill architecture.

One local official put it even more bluntly: "Monuments just don't pay." Many town and village residents back him up, and among them are some who are still bitter about being thrown out of work when the last of the paper mills closed down.

But Gobrecht and Smith are hopeful they can change the viewpoint of some people about the need to preserve the industrial history of Saugerties.

"Saugerties should be proud of having an important area of industrial survival listed on the National Register, if that could be possible," said Gobrecht. "It was a very important area for the entire Hudson Valley from its earliest days, and one of the first major paper-making places in America."

Gobrecht and his colleagues will continue to encourage the proposed survey to photograph and research the buildings. If the survey led to National Register listing, they say, it would give the mills a measure of protection as something important that is worth saving, or thinking about saving.

Said Gobrecht, "Nineteenth century industrial history has usually been left to scholars and specialists, but now some towns are benefiting from adaptive re-use of old buildings. What is possible now wasn't even thought of 10 years ago. In New England, old mills are being used as supermarkets and multi-level shopping centers, without having to do anything to the structures except internal work."

Added Gobrecht, "It is not always obvious to the eye of the average citizen that what is a dead area for vital industry at the moment, might be highly valuable as something more than a highway, empty land or condominiums in the future."

A complete and well-documented survey of the old mills, he said, would be "a very important first step in local and regional planning." He envisions the mill buildings remaining on the local scene, and being put to new uses. And he feels Saugerties residents should decide what they want to save now before waiting for something to happen, and before having to decide in a hurry.

"If you have a National Register District," he said, "the value of the site is considered by the federal government when its future is threatened by the impact of demolition, a highway or other major building enterprises. You can go to the feds and say that you feel this area is special and you want a review process to be undertaken before this known historical and cultural resource is tampered with."

William Davis, a resident of the Ulster County Infirmary, is read a letter from President Gerald R. Ford congratulating him on his birthday by Shirley Blum, activities director at the infirmary. Davis was 106 years old Thursday.

Yeaple Angered by 'Political' Charge

NEW PALTZ — Supervisor William Yeaple said Friday that he is very disturbed that village Mayor John Vett "would even insinuate" that the town board would make decisions based on political considerations.

Yeaple was commenting on Vett's remarks at a village board meeting last week in which the mayor took issue with the town's collecting taxes for snow removal it isn't providing for village residents.

"There's an election coming up this year," said the mayor, "and now might be the time to apply pressure to the town board and get some action on this matter."

The problem, according to Vett, is the $28,000 the village pays the town for snow removal. Since the village provides its own snow removal, at a cost of $15,000, the mayor feels that the town board should not collect the tax.

According to Yeaple, the matter was taken to court several years ago and the town was found to be within its legal rights to collect the money. Vett says that it might be legal, but it's not ethical.

"The law dates back to a time when the village had a larger tax base than the town," said Vett, "and since that situation has changed, I think the law should be changed also."

At present, the village assessment is only 32 per cent of the combined town and village figures.

Meanwhile, at Vett's urging, Yeaple has appointed a committee, consisting of himself and Councilmen Walter Luczal and George Schneider, to study the matter.

"We'll be reviewing the court decision and based on our findings, we'll make recommendations which will be in the best interests of both the town and village residents," he said.

The supervisor said that the matter had been discussed earlier this year by the town board, "but we decided to continue the policy of previous town boards and collect the tax."

Yeaple noted that the town's 1977 budget, with the village snow removal money included, has already been passed and there was nothing that could be done about it this year.

Health Department Issues Warning

Bad Christmas Lights Are a Holiday Hazard

KINGSTON The Ulster County Health Department this week issued a pre-holiday warning to residents about using faulty Christmas lighting.

Dr. Bartholomew Dutto, county health commissioner, pointed out that the holiday lights can present fire and shock hazards to users and passed on information from the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission urging the public to take a number of safety precautions.

Boxed lights should be removed and checked for cracked or broken sockets before they are plugged in. A damaged socket will not effectively insulate a person from electric shock. Do not use sets with cracked or broken sockets.

Check the plug or connector for loose or missing plastic inserts, which are used in some designs to plug in additional strings of lights. If loose or missing, they can expose bare metal conductors.

Push the prongs on the connector against a hard surface to simulate plugging in the set, or plug the connector into a disconnected extension five times. The prongs should remain fixed, neither becoming loose nor causing an insert to push out from the other end. If the prongs or the insert move, be safe — don't use the set.

Check bulb sockets and connectors for exposed or bare wires where insulation may be pulled back. Do not use sets with exposed wires.

With the bulb in place, check the bulb holder and socket for exposed, hair-like wires. These wires may be filament wires which serve as the contact between the bulb and the socket and have been improperly trimmed. Exposed, they can be a shock hazard. Remove the bulbs and trim the wires so they are not exposed outside of the socket.

When reinserting make sure the bulb leads touch the contacts inside the socket.

When inserting and removing the bulb and its holder from the socket, the contact in the socket should not be loose or slide about.

Before beginning to decorate, place the light set on a non-flammable surface and plug in for 10 or 15 minutes. Then check the set for smoking or melting.

Snow and Cold Hit County

KINGSTON — Another one and a half inches of snow fell on Kingston Saturday, causing some hazardous road conditions and numerous property damage accidents.

Assistant Kingston City Engineer Norwood A. Locke said Saturday that the low temperature for the day was 4 degrees above zero — not a record, "but pretty darn cold."

Saturday's snow came on top of two inches of precipitation which froze over the county in record breaking low temperatures Thursday.

Local police and fire officials reported a number of weather related accidents, including seven chimney fires and a multitude of minor traffic accidents along slippery city and county roads.

The New York Thruway police said that by early Saturday night that roadway was clear and no accidents had been reported.

City and county road crews were out plowing and sanding the early snowfall, but cold overnight temperatures were expected to cause some freezing and dangerous driving conditions especially in the more rural areas.

Liz Taylor Marries Again

MIDDLEBURG, Va. (UPI) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor married former Nixon administration Navy Secretary John W. Warner in a sunset ceremony at his Atoka farm Saturday — her seventh marriage and his second.

Miss Taylor, 44, was divorced earlier this year for the second time from Welsh actor Richard Burton. He later married Susan Hunt, former wife of world champion race car driver James Hunt.

A family spokesman said the couple will leave next week for a European honeymoon and Christmas.

The spokesman said only immediate family members and persons who either lived or worked at the farm outside Middleburg — about 50 in all — attended the sunset ceremony, presided over by Rev. Neil Morgan of the Emmanuel Episcopal Church of Middleburg.

Miss Taylor had spent most of early Saturday abed, recuperating from back injuries suffered in a fall from a horse Nov. 23.

Housekeepers said she and

Warner, 49, took an afternoon stroll "walking across the farm," then returned to be married.

Miss Taylor wore a knee-length cashmere dress which she described as "the color of heather with a tweed coat in all the colors of the countryside trimmed with gray fur." She also carried a bouquet of wild heather.

Morgan said the wedding was "a lovely out-of-doors ceremony on a hillside ... The moon was on one side, the setting sun was on the other. We used the new service from the Book of Common Prayer."

Mrs. Morgan described the scene as "very pastoral and bucolic ... with cows scattered over the hillside ... making a tremendous racket."

Florence Klotz designed the wedding outfit and Halston produced the trousseau, a family spokesman said. Her wedding band was given by Warner's father to his mother 50 years ago this week. The bride gave him a wedding ring melted down from a gold ornament she had given her father.

Mrs. Taylor's previous husbands included hotel heir Conrad Hilton Jr., Michael Wilding, movie producer-director Mike Todd, singer Eddie Fisher and Burton twice.

Warner was married once previously and has three children. He became navy secretary in the Nixon administration May 4, 1972.

John Springer, a family spokesman in New York, said the couple will leave early next week for a brief trip to Israel where she is scheduled to be guest of honor at a hospital fund-raising dinner.

Warner, who recently resigned his post on the American Bicentennial Commission, will dedicate a forest in honor of the U.S. Bicentennial, Springer said.

The pair then will leave for a honeymoon visit to the actress's childhood home in England before traveling on to Gstaad, Switzerland, for Christmas with their seven children, he said.

Springer said the couple will take up residence at the Atoka farm early next year.

ESKA, Board Meeting

KINGSTON — Fred Ott, spokesman for the Educational Secretaries of the Kingston Area said Friday that he expects to meet this week with William Turcotte, chief negotiator for the Kingston Board of Education, in an attempt to reach a contract settlement.

The secretaries have been with out a contract since June 30 and in September the two sides declared an impasse.

State factfinder Richard Bradley has attended the last two bargaining sessions and unsuccessfully attempted to mediate a settlement.

According to Ott, if a settlement isn't reached soon, Bradley is expected to accept briefs from the two sides and issue recommendations based on those briefs.

Turcotte said he could not make any statement on the matter, but he did acknowledge that he sought the feelings of the school board at an executive session Thursday night. "All I can say is that we're still talking and that's good. The fact that the negotiations haven't broken down is encouraging," said Turcotte.

Aside from salary and benefits, the two sides have been unable to agree on leave of absence provisions and on just cause provisions, which would include disciplinary matters.

Rondout Savings has Pension Plans for People...

Because Rondout Savings is a People Bank, we offer two plans to self-employed, self-reliant people to help them build up a retirement plan — a pension plan of their own. Moreover, these plans are tax deductible on your present income taxes — which is one thing just plain people deserve. The two plans are:

THE I.R.A. PLAN for people whose companies do not have a retirement plan. This plan enables you to take 15% of your annual earnings up to $1500 a year and place it in a retirement fund that earns high interest — and deduct the $1500 from income tax.

THE KEOGH PLAN for actors, bakers, carpenters, doctors and all other self employed people. Set aside 15% of your annual earnings up to $7500 a year in a retirement fund that earns high interest — and at the same time gives you a deduction from your income tax.

BOTH PLANS help people build up their own retirement pensions — and the income from interest is tax-free until you retire, when your tax bracket will be lower.

Market Place Seen Factor Whether New Steel Increase Stays

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Steel company officials Saturday grumbled at the aggressive jawboning last week designed to roll back a 6 per cent price increase during the waning days of the Ford Administration.

"Those guys down in Washington think they know more about the steel market than we do," said an industry official. "If the market was weak, the market would impose the price controls. The market place is the toughest control of all."

The official wasn't only complaining about the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which said the increases could touch off a round of inflation. In Plains, Ga., President-elect Jimmy Carter said he hoped steel executives would "terminate the increase to hold down the inflationary spiral."

Irritated by the critics, United States Steel Corp. Chairman Edgar Speer lashed out:

"They don't buy steel, not a damn one of them."

L. William Seidman, coordinator of White House economic policy, agreed that the market place will decide whether the prices stick. One analyst said if the prices do fall, it will be known by January.

But if they hold, it will mean an overall 12 per cent price boost in sheet and strip steel, used by the appliance and automotive industries, in 1976. Observers believed that in order to prevent this, the administration launched its harshest attack on price increases in two years. But nobody expects the criticism alone to have much effect.

The price increases, which went into effect last Wednesday, were made at this time for several reasons.

Since the Carter administration machinery is not fully in motion yet, it was an opportune time to act, according to some sources. Carter said after the increases were announced Nov. 24 that he would not impose price controls during his administration.

But the president-elect is considering an "incomes policy." That would require advance notice of pricing actions and generally make things more troublesome for sellers who want to raise prices in the competitive steel market.

"Obviously, they were thinking of the possibility of price controls when Carter moves in," said a source with contacts with several steel firms. But Speer disputes this view, and in doing so, underscored the economic factor in the price action.

"If we were worried that the Carter administration were going to impose price controls, we would not have come out and said we would not raise prices on any other products than flat-rolled." The steel industry contends that, unlike many steel products, flat-rolled products are doing well — that the demand for them is good. But executives say that the profit margin on sheet and strip steel is poor. Analysts point out that through September of 1976, sheet and strip shipments were up 42.5 over the first nine months of 1975. But at the same time profitability on sheet and strip was only 3.6 per cent through September, off from 4.7 per cent for all of 1975.

"The problem is," said Speer, "that if you have a product line (sheet and strip) that isn't viable, you have one of two decisions. Either get a price that makes it viable or you don't make the product."

William Verity, Armco Steel Corp. chairman, agreed. A price increase is necessary, he said, "if we are to stay in the flat rolled business."

'A Good Month On Bench'

KINGSTON — The Third Judicial District of New York State disposed of 111 cases from the general calendar during November.

Judge Edward S. Conway of Albany, who handled Part One of the calendar, called it "as good as any month I have had in my 10 years on the bench."

Conway heard 195 motions and rendered five non-jury verdicts. Judge Robert Eckert of Schoharie County, who handled Part Two of the calendar, granted 41 divorces, drew 15 juries, and rendered verdicts in two cases that went to verdicts.

"I am sure this excellent record was due to the cooperation Judge Eckert and I received from members of the Ulster County Bar, court attendants and the jurors themselves. They were excellent."

one side of him and the girls on the other. Closest to their father are eldest son James and youngest daughter Julie.

Several hundred persons attended the mass of Christian burial at the church, concelebrated by Msgr. Brennan, the Rev. Charles P. McHale, associate pastor of St. Peter's, and the Rev. Thomas Loftus, pastor of the Church of the Presentation.

Among the assemblage was the student body of Kingston Catholic School, formerly St. Peter's and St. Mary's Schools, and a group of the students joined the mass by performing hymns and religious songs, accompanied by folk guitars.

Adult soloists were Betty Sass and Richard Shearer, and organist was Nan Goldrick.

Bearers were all members of the Town of Esopus Highway Department — Supt. Joseph H. Clark, for whom Avery worked the past decade, foreman Casimiro B. Landi, and co-workers Marty Reise, Alan Larkin, John Wood and Richard Pitt.

Special contingents of town officials and the Hasbrouck Engine Co., in which Avery served, called at the funeral home during visiting hours Thursday night.

Town offices closed Friday during the services so officials could attend.

"In a small hamlet, a father and the children have been taken. We do not know the reason why," Msgr. Brennan said. "We can only give to you who have been left behind the example of Mary and her son when Joseph was taken . . . and the sorrow of Mary when her son was taken."

City Police Make Rape Arrest

KINGSTON — Kingston detectives arrested 19-year-old Edward Cercone Saturday on charges of raping an 18-year-old mentally retarded woman.

Cercone, of 72 Cedar St., was arraigned on third degree rape charges before City Judge Hubert Richter and released in the custody of his attorney pending a Dec. 7 court appearance.

Police report that the incident took place on Thanksgiving morning, Nov. 25, when the woman was visiting her mother, who lives in the same building as Cercone.

The woman's name is being withheld by police because of her classification by psychologists as a minor.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of Jennie A. Corrado wishes to express its sincere appreciation to the many people who where so kind including Dr. Hartman; Dr. Clarkin; The Nurses at the Benedictine Hospital—Spellman 2; the staff in the Intensive care Unit; relatives, neighbors; and friends for their compassion. The many letters of condolences, Mass cards, floral tributes, expressions of thoughtfulness and love were so greatly appreciated. God Bless Each of You.

In his reading, the Rev. Loftus turned to Isaiah and the prophecy that Christ's resurrection would "swallow up death forever, and the Lord God will wipe away tears from all faces."

The Avery house, apparently set afire by a smouldering couch into which a cigarette had been dropped, will be demolished.

Mrs. Avery is staying with relatives. Broadcast executive Harry M. Thayer of radio station WGHQ, Kingston, has begun a fund drive in her behalf.

he said. "They should not be deputized witch hunters to hunt down welfare recipients."

Added Hetherington, "The people in this case have a right to privacy, and to the protection of that privacy—and Greco's contemplated action would violate that."

Michael Catalinotto, Saugerties town attorney, pointed out that state law provides "no cause for action for embarrassment."

He said town board members requested Greco to read the names to assist them in coping with "revenue problems in connection with the public hearing on the town budget." Those problems, he said, had centered in the fact that the home relief budget had jumped from $8,000 to $107,000 in a few years.

Catalinotto said the welfare confidentiality law notes that names of recipients should not be included in a published report, or printed in a newspaper report, or at any public meeting, "except" a meeting of county supervisors, town councils, or town boards. Nor should be names be disclosed, he said, "except" to town boards, according to the law.

Said Catalinotto, "Action by the town board requesting Supervisor Greco to read the names would have been appropriate, and the supervisor should have been permitted to report that information to the board."

Argued Catalinotto, "The board is a duly authorized legislative body, and should not be told how to conduct its public business. It has a right to seek information by whatever legal means is available, the law was not intended to stop board members from getting information, privately or in public, on welfare matters for budgetary purposes."

When Judge Williams asked both attorneys if the Freedom of Information Act "came into play" in the matter, Hetherington said it did not. But he noted that the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania had ruled that The Philadelphia Inquirer could not publish welfare names because the law "preserved privacy and enforced protection" to recipients.

But Catalinotto argued that the question of free press was very definitely involved. If the injunction on Greco was continued until Jan. 1, he said, the open meetings law would further affect the case. Under that new law, set to begin the first of the year, the town board would be confronted, he noted, with regulations prohibiting executive sessions. And the law, he said, does not include any reference with respect to reporting on welfare recipients.

To permanently restrain Greco then, he said, would be "enjoining the board from executing its authority and from pursuing the business for which its members were elected." If the board wanted information on names of recipients, he said, it could not obtain them either in executive or public session after Jan. 1.

"The Saugerties Town Board," he said, "is responsible for levying taxes, and has an interest in welfare expenditures for that purpose. And that interest should not be construed as a violation of privacy, which is waived by those seeking assistance under the welfare law."

Herman Rafalowsky

The sudden passing of Herman Rafalowsky will surely leave a void not only in the lives of his widow and children, but in the community life of Kingston.

Had he done nothing more during his long life than establish one of the finest men's clothing stores in the Mid-Hudson Valley, Mr. Rafalowsky would have been a man to remember. But his business was only one of his successful enthusiasms. From the time of his arrival in Kingston from his native Russia in 1914, he devoted what hours he could spare to enriching the lives of his friends and fellow citizens.

Mr. Rafalowsky was a man of serious purposes but he may be remembered as much for his irrepressible sense of fun. Only two weeks ago he was honored at the 40th annual Congregation Ahavath Israel Thanksgiving Ball, a festivity he initiated in 1936 to raise money for the congregation's first full time rabbi. Over the years this event brought many of the greatest figures in American popular music to play in Kingston.

For years he took part in the annual Kiwanis Kapers. He never failed to bring down the house.

Mr. Rafalowsky's accomplishments as a civic leader and charitable fund-raiser were legion. He served as co-chairman of the Benedictine Hospital drive to raise money for the Cardinal Spellman Pavillion and chaired the drive for the Franklin Street AME Zion Church. He was active in the United Way, the Chamber of Commerce and many Jewish charities.

His passing is the second loss of a prominent local Jewish leader in recent months. In September, Kingston banker Alfred D. Ronder died in an accident in New Jersey.

The Freeman joins the family and many friends of Herman Rafalowsky in mourning the passing of this exemplary man.

Freeman Readers Write

Bob Horan Needs Correcting

Dear Editor:

Your newspaper recently published a letter containing numerous statements strongly critical of New Paltz Village government and New Paltz taxation. The letter was signed: "Bob Horan, New Paltz."

In an open democracy, any citizen can write a letter to a newspaper to explain his personal views about government. However, it seems to me that such an action carries with it a very serious degree of responsibility for accuracy and fairness.

Mr. Horan — who is not listed at all on current New Paltz tax rolls, and is not listed in the New Paltz Telephone Book, either — has made statements that cannot go uncorrected.

1. Mr. Horan's statement that the combined population of the New Paltz Town, Village and College "surpasses the population of the City of Kingston," is grossly inaccurate.

2. Mr. Horan criticizes the New Paltz Village government for being "so economically unprepared and lacking in services," indicating that citizens must pay privately for garbage removal. Is Mr. Horan saying that he wants New Paltz government to contract with a garbage-removal sanitation company to remove private garbage at public taxpayer expense? Surely Mr. Horan must realize that this would bring a tax increase for all of New Paltz.

3. Mr. Horan's complaint regarding taxation fails to give fair credit to the New Paltz Town Board for their work this year, which resulted in a 1977 New Paltz Budget that will reduce the per thousand assessed valuation tax rate below the 1976 level.

4. Mr. Horan attempts to lay undeserved blame upon Village government for police situations that are not solely a Village government responsibility.

5. Mr. Horan also fails to point out that work by New Paltz Village officials in 1976 resulted in bringing to New Paltz an outright federal grant of $95,000. This money will be applied to the project of replacing part of a 70-year-old sewer line on Main Street that is badly damaged. Because this federal grant has been received, New Paltz Village taxpayers will be relieved of a potential tax burden that would have been very heavy. That is because if the federal money had not been obtained, the village taxpayers would not only have had to pay the principal amount, but also high interest for money the village would have had to borrow from a bank for a 20 or 30-year period.

It is very important for taxpayers to understand that chances to apply for — and obtain — outright federal grants are DOUBLED in New Paltz because there are two municipal governments here. Recently, for example, the New Paltz Town government applied for federal funds to improve Elting Library; but the request was rejected. But a SECOND application was made by the New Paltz Village government, this time for sewer aid, and because our community had a second chance, $95,000 of federal aid was received into New Paltz.

Because New Paltz has Village government, the community receives thousands of dollars in per capita state aid every single year than New Paltz would receive without a Village government. This situation is sometimes not appreciated by the taxpaying public until after a village is abolished; then — too late to do anything about it — it becomes clear that thousands of dollars in per capita state aid have been sacrificed. Consolidation of local governments does help occasionally, when Village populations are four thousand or less; but when they have a larger population, as the New Paltz Village, consolidation can possibly do real tax damage because of current state tax laws pertaining to per capita state aid.

Toughing It Out in Taiwan

In Washington, at midweek, a day-long conference of American scholars, diplomats, and journalists focused on the question, "The United States and China After Mao."

They were bound by the conviction that the United States ought not to fall for the old "normalization" line, so attractive to Democrats propelled by the inertial impulses of their own slogans. It was an impressive affair, by all accounts: and, in intensity of conviction and enthusiasm for its point of view, testimony to the fact that the old anti-Chinese communist coalition is not quite dead.

The root of the intellectual-juridical problem is the Shanghai Declaration of 1972. This was promulgated, you will remember, after several all-night sessions in Peking and Hangchow between President Nixon and Chou En-lai. What the Shanghai Declaration said was that all of China (meaning, the mainland and Taiwan) is one country and that interference in the internal affairs of a country (not counting Vietnam, Korea, Berlin, Poland, Rumania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, and Germany) will not be tolerated.

The unofficial American interpretation of this was that it would not interfere in our relations with Taiwan, since international declarations of this character tend not to upset de facto accommodations of long standing. But the Chinese and more importantly the Chinese lobby in the United States took the declaration to mean a mandate for instant normalization. Normalization defined as ditching Taiwan, by terminating our defense treaty, and withdrawing our diplomatic representation.

It is a curious phenomenon we see in America, where it would appear that many of our diplomats and poets dream at night about the unification of China. Not since Garibaldi stirred all of Europe with his passion for the unification of Italy has there been anything comparable. There are others of us who manage whole weeks at a time caring not at all if Taiwan and Peking follow their separate ways, but we are perhaps untouched by that idealistic compulsion. One wonders why Senator Mansfield and others spend less time dreaming about the unification of Germany, or Korea — but there is no doubt that their dreams constitute an important datum in American political life.

Now, the consensus of the conference in Washington is that mainland China desires far less ardently than the United States that unification. On meeting after meeting between Chinese plenipotentiaries and the American Secretary of State, the matter of Taiwan has been listed deep down in the agenda, packaged with problems that receive only cursory attention.

The assumption is this, that if the United States were to desert Taiwan, there would be no excuse left for failure by the mainland to attempt to take it over by military force. But since this would require an amphibious operation on a great scale, the cost might not prove to be worth it, and the results of it on world opinion would be unpredictable. Beside which, presumably the whole operation could be aborted at any moment by the simple act of a declaration of independence by Taiwan. This could of course be managed at any moment.

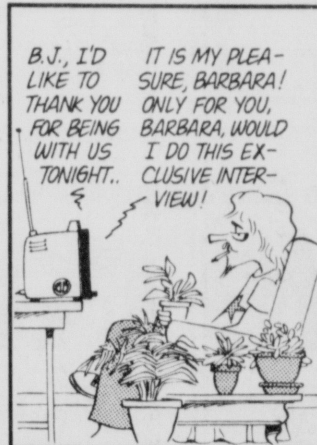

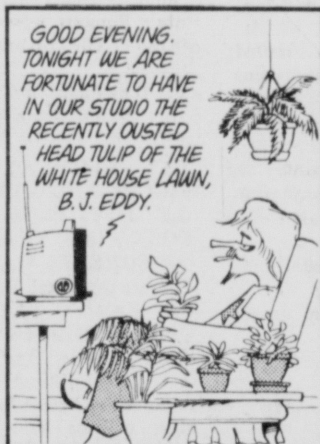

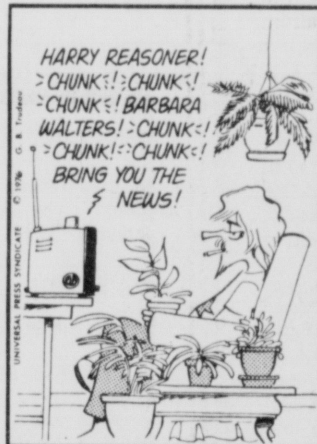

And then looked at the other way 'round: what would we concretely achieve by turning Taiwan over to the mainland? Our diplomatic representative in Peking is not that impatient for promotion to the rank of ambassador to China. His ascendancy would not, in any event, mean access to secrets of Chinese life which we need to have in order to spare ourselves a third world war. Fully accredited diplomatic installations maintained by western European countries are as much at sea as we in trying to understand the drift of affairs in China.

The disposition of the Chinese to amiability toward the United States reflects one single consideration: Are we tough enough and strong enough to provide a counterweight to Soviet strength? Here we have the subtlest consideration of them all. Although by yielding Taiwan we would be accommodating China, in doing so we would reveal that weakness in character which would make us less estimable, strategically, in the eyes of the Chinese. Thus all the arguments, let alone the moral arguments, call on us to stay. It is nice, every now and then, to hear it said: Yankee, welcome.

The Pain in My Neck

WASHINGTON—It is regrettable that as the massage parlor industry grows by leaps and bounds there are fewer and fewer places that actually offer you a real massage—one that will alleviate pain and distress when you really need it.

I discovered this last Sunday when I found myself with a pinched nerve and decided that I might get some relief from the strong hands of a tough masseur or masseuse who was willing to throw me across the room, if necessary, to get the crick out of my neck.

There are 10 pages devoted to massage parlors in the Washington Yellow Pages, but very few seem to have too many massage specialists on duty on Sunday afternoon.

The listings include "Aladdin's Chest," "Bunny's Topkopi," "Bobbie Jo's Flaming Den," "Tiffany's Velvet Touch," and "Sheik Abdullah's Harem." I finally called "Lolita's Geisha House" because my fingers got tired of walking across the Yellow Pages. Lolita's ad said they made house calls.

A man answered the phone. "I have this crick in my neck," I said. "And I was wondering if you'd send over an expert masseur."

"Of course." Do you want a blonde or a brunette?"

"I don't care about the color of his hair. I want a guy with strong hands."

"Oh you're one of them," he said. "One of what?" I said.

"Well, we usually send out masseuses for men and masseurs for women."

"Look, I'm not particular as long as the person knows what he or she is doing"

"They know what they're doing, all right," he assured me. "They wouldn't be working for Lolita's Geisha House if they didn't. We can fulfill any fantasy you have in mind."

"Well, I do have this fantasy," I said, "that someone will come over to my house and take his or her strong hands and wring them around my neck and get the crick out of it."

"I see. You're into sadomasochism," he said. "Would you like her to wear an all-leather outfit?"

"I don't care what she wears. As a matter of fact, I don't care if you send over a 300-pound gorilla as long as I can get some relief."

"We've never had anyone ask for a gorilla before. You do have some strange fantasies."

"Look, I really don't want a gorilla. What I had in mind was one of those large, heavily built Swedish or Finnish women, one who is stacked like a brick federal building and has steel arms and hands that can tear a Washington Redskins linebacker in half."

"What kind of a massage parlor do you think we're running? Our girls come from some of the best families in the country. Several are graduates of Vassar and Sweetbriar, and we have one who has a master's degree from the University of Tokyo.

"We have the most beautiful girls in the Washington area, and while we try to make all our clients happy there are limits to the services we will provide. Now if you really want a gorilla you're going to have to give us a few days to find one and you'll have to pay for his trainer because we can't allow him to make house calls on his own."

"I need someone this afternoon. Don't you have a simple masseur or masseuse who just gets pleasure out of rubbing sore muscles and massaging bad backs and necks?"

"We might have," he said suspiciously. "But how do we know you're not from the vice squad?"

"I swear to you I'm not. I have an American Express credit card, a MasterCard and a BankAmericard. Would I be able to get credit from all three if I was a member of the vice squad?"

"All right," he said. "We'll send you over Annie."

"Is she strong?"

"Strong? She'll put three lashes across your back with a horsewhip and you'll forget your neck pain in a flash."

"Thanks, but no thanks. I'll call the YMCA."

"It's up to you, but I doubt if they'll have a gorilla working on Sunday."

Coal Boom Holds Out A Threat

WASHINGTON — President-elect Jimmy Carter, if he accepts the advice of his energy experts, will attempt to curtail America's increasing reliance on nuclear energy and oil. Energy needs in the near future, they believe, can best be met by better exploitation of our abundant coal reserves.

That posture, if adopted, will be viewed with mixed emotions by the beleaguered people of Appalachia, the heart of the strip mining country. These proud mountain people fully realize they need the jobs that mining brings, but they are distraught over the destruction that comes in its wake. Most do not want to see strip mining banned, but they would like it to be better regulated to protect themselves and the land they love.

Large areas of these forested mountain ranges have been turned into a wasteland that resembles a lunar landscape. Abrupt 200-foot cliffs dot the countryside. Vast gray mounds of siltstone residues hover ominously over clapboard houses, inviting disaster with each heavy rain.

Even worse than the environmental havoc is the toll on human existence. Impoverished residents of Appalachia are literally being blasted out of their homes by strip miners.

Last September, we cited a study compiled by the Center for Science in Public Interest which charged that strip mine blasting caused "over $200 million damage in 1975 to 10,000 private citizens." Over the past 10 years, the damage has exceeded $1.5 billion and has affected 75,000 people.

In some areas, wells have caved in and the water table is falling. Walls have been cracked and windows shattered. Children have been hit by flying rock. Some people have fled from their homes in fear of the erratic vibrations.

To get the story behind the statistics, we sent our roving reporter Hal Bernton, into the coal counties of southwest Virginia, one of the most heavily strip-mined areas in the nation. He spoke with families who have been chased from their homes by strip mine operators and with others who have chosen to hang on.

In the small town of Norton, he found an elderly couple whose house backed up to a strip mine. Virginia law, incidentally, permits strip mining to within five feet of a dwelling.

"We value our house more than a million dollars and now it's ruined," said the old people, pointing out wide cracks in their basement caused by the blasting. "In the summer," they said, "the dust from the strip mine settled in thick layers all over our bedsheets and dining room table. Outside, the air was so dirty you could barely make out the house from across the street."

A few blocks away, our reporter listened to the complaints of an angry group of people whose houses had been damaged by the blasting. "There's no warning," said one man. "You hear the blast and look out for rocks."

"One morning, the blasts nearly shook me out of bed," a woman exclaimed. Beside her as she spoke to Bernton was a framed picture whose glass had been cracked by the blasting.

Once, a group of homeowners protested the destruction of their homes to the strip mining owner. "Go ahead and sue me for damages," came the reply.

The owner, meanwhile, has moved out of town and now lives in a comfortable brick home adorned with oversized white pillars. A tennis court and swimming pool grace the grounds, and a helicopter whisks him back and forth from the coal fields each day.

In the same area, Bernton spoke with the wife of a retired military man. The couple was forced to move their three children out of their home when it became apparent they would soon be surrounded on three sides by strip mines.

The father and two teen-age sons contracted the lung disease pneumoconiosis from breathing the dust raised by the blasting. A three-year-old son began going into hysterics with each explosion. "He would be playing and they would set off a blast and it would scare him to death," said the mother.

Nor are these the only depredations the Carter administration must contend with in the mining country. Housing in the area is in critically short supply because the giant coal companies bought up the land years ago, when it could be had for as little as $5 an acre.

Many of the region's poorest people still depend on coal to heat their homes. Ironically, even though they live in the heart of coal country, they find it difficult to obtain enough of the fuel to get them through the winter.

This is because the coal companies prefer to produce a fine grained substance called steam coal, which is sold by the trainload to major power producers. Lump coal, the kind burned in home furnaces, is not produced in quantity because the low demand makes it unprofitable.

Many of the elderly who are living on fixed incomes cannot afford the exorbitant cost of lump coal. One federally-funded senior citizens organization has been trying to raise money to provide emergency free coal to those in greatest need. Some small strip mine owners have donated to the fund, but few if any large coal companies have kicked in any cash.

Our reporter visited an elderly widow who lived in a small house on top of a secluded ridge. She spoke of the problems of finding usable coal in this coal-rich area. In one corner of her living room, a pot-bellied stove wafted a blast of sulfur-scented heat into the air. She had moved her bed into the living room so that she could stay warm at night. Over the bed hung a cracked mirror and a picture of Jesus Christ.

"Last year," she told Bernton, "I managed to buy coal at about $25 a ton. But this year, I couldn't find any coal. I was down to my last two or three buckets. Lord have mercy on me if it snowed and I ain't got no coal."

Will Carter Tackle Problem No. 1?

GRENADA, West Indies —I run into quite a few prosperous Americans down here who are still suffering from shakes they acquired when their man, Ford, lost the election. They seem to have swallowed their party's anti-Carter propaganda whole.

"He'll spend us to death with his welfare programs," they moan. This is curious to me since Carter's record for doing just the opposite, when he was top hand in Georgia, should count for something. He left that state better and more humanely run and piled up not a deficit but a surplus.

Ah well — if people don't like facts, they simply ignore them. So I stay out of such arguments and try slipping in one for my man Carter which hasn't had even a fraction of the exposure his history as a Governor got in the campaign.

We will be the only country whose head man knows what he is talking about.

"Have you ever stopped to think," I put it, "that come January, we will be the only country in the whole wide world whose head man knows what he is talking about when he tackles the single most important unsolved problem that has to be mastered for civilization to survive: the future's sources of power?"

He will be the only head of state who has sound credentials in the scientific world. Brezhnev, Mao's successor, the leaders in Europe and what's called The Third World — they are all idiots, like you and me, when it comes to understanding even the most elementary facts about nuclear power. Politicians and power brokers, they must rely on the judgements of specialists whose languages they can't even speak. But, come January, we will have a man trained in science at our Naval Academy who will know both how little he knows and how much — and with what urgency — we have still to find out.

To me, Carter as President of the United States is indeed something new in the political galaxy, a man who has the knowledge and training to choose and lead the bright ones on whose brains our future depends. In my judgment of his performance, how he uses that component of his qualifications for leadership will be what will impress me most. I will be watching to see what priority he gives to Europe.

Here I go back to an old favorite idea that I've been plugging for years. The Space Agency, now concerning itself with toy shovelfuls of dust from planets light years away, is a grouping of very superior scientific minds. They are already in being and already financed. Hasn't our Chief Executive — come 1977, Mr. Carter — the right as their commanding officer simply to say to them something like "No more space shots. You are not fired, or disbanded. Just stay where you are but start using those brains of yours, and your laboratories and contacts, to develop new sources of energy, as well as safer, less polluting ways of using the sources we already have."

"Use your brains, boys, use your brains. I'll bet that with such a fresh beginning, on such a challenging new mission, you will start a real revival in the whole world's scientific establishment. And I'll be behind you, right down the line, not only because I believe in you, but because I think the American people would rather the tax dollars, with which you are paid go to finding them cheaper, safer sources of Energy — instead of wasting it on million-dollar blast-offs simply to satisfy astronomers' curiosity."

In the conversion of scientist's ideas to practical applications, there are jobs that make jobs and the use of educations now being wasted. But that's only one benign by-product. The first objective is the organization of our combined talents to get going on Public Problem No. 1: the energy to turn civilization's wheels.

Our Lonely GOP Governors

By DONALD LAMBRO
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some admitted they were an endangered species. All could have called themselves, quite honestly, the loneliest men in town.

They were country's remaining Republican governors, trying to figure out why their tribe has been depleted to a dismal dozen and how they can reverse that trend.

ANALYSIS

Old and new alike, the GOP governors turned their annual two-day winter conference last week into a political psychoanalysis session in which they dissected their party from the White House to the local precinct.

The table the governors sat around was small by past conference standards. There was almost a seminar atmosphere as they debated the future of the Republican Party.

Some argued over who was to blame for the party's defeat in November.

Former Gov. Tom McCall of Oregon, a Nelson Rockefeller fan to the end, said the GOP would be in great shape today if Nelson had been nominated and elected president in 1968 instead of Richard Nixon. McCall blamed the party's declining fortunes on its right wing.

It was McCall who intoned that the GOP "has made so many fatal mistakes it finds itself an endangered species at its own graveside." Others who followed him accepted the endangered species comparison.

One of the rising new stars, Gov.-elect James "Big Jim" Thompson of Illinois, told how he trounced his Democratic opponent by learning how to "identify" with the people and "to not take myself too seriously."

One of the departing colleagues, young Gov. Christopher "Kit" Bond of Missouri, said he had learned a great deal from his upset defeat for a second term, indicating that he might be back to fight again one day soon.

But Thompson, Bond, McCall, former Treasury Secretary John Connally, who was governor of Texas, former Gov. George Romney of Michigan, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and many others appeared to share the prevailing view: the party has to change its image and change it fast.

Connally, who hinted he might be interested in becoming GOP national chairman, spoke of launching an aggressive hard-sell campaign to win new converts for the party and field "bold new proposals" in response to Democratic programs.

Thompson, sounding very much like the presidential hopeful he is being trumpeted to be, said the party was crippled by a severely negative image and that it had to broaden base, particularly among blacks and the young.

At the end, Kansas Gov. Robert Bennett, new chairman of the GOP governors, announced that "the funeral that was scheduled for the Republican Party will not be held."

"The party will survive," Bond said.

Japan's Scandal-Wracked Tories Face the Music Today at Polls

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan holds a general election today amid polls showing the $12 million Lockheed payoffs scandal may cost the pro-American ruling party its parliamentary majority for the first time since the end of World War II.

About 77 million Japanese are eligible to cast ballots for all 511 seats in the House of Representatives, the lower house of Japan's parliament. Polls opened at 7 a.m. (5 p.m. EST Saturday) and close at 6 p.m. (4 a.m. EST today). Rural areas begin counting the ballots tonight, but vote tabulation will not get under way in big cities like Osaka and Tokyo until Monday.

The final results are expected to be known about 6 p.m. (4 a.m. EST) Monday. Newspaper surveys have predicted the ruling Liberal Democratic party will get from 244 to 268 seats. The polls also predicted the Socialists would finish second, with somewhere between 116 and 139.

Prime Minister Takeo Miki leads the ruling Liberal Democrats, for months wracked by the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. payoffs scandal.

However, the 69-year-old Miki may be ousted from premiership—no matter whether his party wins or loses—in a post-election party convention to be called around Dec. 20. Miki's decision to "get to the bottom" of charges that the U.S. aircraft manufacturer spent more than $12 million to promote plane sales in Japan has earned him a host of enemies within the party and in the business community.

The government's "thorough investigation" has led to the indictments of several ranking party members, including former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka on a charge of accepting a $1.67 million bribe from Lockheed.

Tanaka, 58, is free on bail. He has resigned from the ruling party but is running as an independent in his native province of Niigata. He is expected to win re-election handily.

Two other ranking Liberal Democrats indicted in the Lockheed case—former Transportation Minister Tomisaburo Hashimoto, 75, and former Deputy Transportation Minister Takayuki Sato—are also running and newspaper surveys show they are expected to win.

The Liberal Democratic party is certain to survive today's election as Japan's largest political party. The opposition is fragmented among five parties. The Liberal Democrats' archrival, the Japan Socialist party, is running only 162 candidates, too few to secure a majority.

But political observers say even if the Liberal Democrats fail to win the 256 seats needed for a majority, it will be able to govern with the help of independent conservatives or one of the smaller opposition parties.

Saugerties Stockaders Plan Holiday House

SAUGERTIES — The Saugerties Stockaders will hold a Holiday House for eight days beginning Saturday, Dec. 11, at the Precious Pot Building, Main and Partition Streets, Saugerties.

The Holiday House will be opened by Santa Claus, who is scheduled to arrive Saturday in time for a big parade.

On Sunday, Dec. 12, the youthful Stockaders will hold a reception for Saugerties area senior citizens from 2 to 4 p.m.

During the following week, the Holiday House will be open weekdays from 6 to 8:30 p.m., and on Saturday, Dec. 18, from 1 to 5 p.m. On Sunday, Dec. 19, the Stockaders will present a living Nativity. From Monday, Dec. 13, through Friday, Dec. 17, the mothers of Stockaders and members of the board of directors will conduct a bake sale at the Holiday House.

County Receives $1,373,830 for Welfare

KINGSTON — The county has received $1,373,830 from the state comptroller to cover 90 per cent of expected welfare costs this month.

The money is the expected state and federal portion of the total social services programs costs for December.

The additional 10 per cent is payable after the state actually verifies the December expenditures.

The total distribution to 57 counties outside New York City amounts to $90,745,099.

The city received a $73,150,000 federal share, but the state is withholding its $27.9 million cut to repay prior advances made to the city. These figures for New York City represent anticipated spending for the first 15 days of the month, only. Similar payments will be due New York City on Dec. 15 for anticipated costs in the last half of December.

Bureau Elects

ELLENVILLE — Richard McGuire, a Washington County dairyman, was reelected to his seventh term as president of the New York Farm Bureau at the annual convention in the Hotel Nevele.

Delegates from New York's 52 agricultural counties reelected Albany County dairy farmer Harry Garry to a second term as vice president.

McGuire has been a member of the New York Farm Bureau Board of Directors since 1961 and has served as state chairman of the records-management service. He was elected to the board of directors of the American Farm Bureau Federation in 1972, and is on the American Farm Bureau executive committee as well.

More than 700 farmers and their wives at the three-day convention elected five farm leaders to the NYFB board of Directors. Elected to a first term was Clara Taylor of Oneida County. Reelected were Edwin Fisher of Wyoming County, Floyd Knapp of Steuben County, Philip Griffen of Saratoga County and Charles Wille of Orange County.

Paul Taber, a long-time leader in advancing the cause of agriculture, was awarded the NYFB Distinguished Service to Agriculture Award.

Taber, who has served as vice president and executive assistant to the group vice president for staff services of Agway Inc. of Syracuse, has given more than 40 years of service to Agway and the agricultural youth of the state.

Taber was a co-founder of the New York State Council of Agricultural Organizations and a founder of Agricultural Affiliates. For the past 23 years, he has been a director of the New York State Council of Farmer Cooperatives and has been a member of the New York State Agricultural Resources Commission since its founding.

Farm Bureau delegates voted to oppose the siting of nuclear plants on productive farmland at Jamesport on Long Island, as proposed by the Long Island Lighting Company. Delegates urged state agencies to disapprove such siting.

Their resolution said: "Siting of new nuclear power plants should not occur until problems such as waste disposal, environmental and health hazards, and safety procedures are resolved. Toward that end the Farm Bureau recommends that the New York State Legislature adopt the Nuclear Responsibility Act."

Ulster County was represented at the three-day convocation by Alden Robinson of Accord and Robert Enle of Clintondale.

CYRUS VANCE: He's something different.

Vance Is the Opposite of Kissinger

By UPI

Cyrus Roberts Vance, Jimmy Carter's choice for secretary of state, is regarded by those who have worked with him at the State Department and Pentagon as quiet, a good listener, optimistic, considerate and a great team player.

He is, in other words, almost the exact opposite of Henry Kissinger, the man who has dominated U.S. foreign policy for 3½ years.

Vance, 59, looks like the Wall Street lawyer he is. And he has an almost uncanny lack of summing up the consensus and coming up with a compromise.

The former Army secretary is a prototype of the Eastern establishment. Although he was born in Clarksburg, W. Va., he went to all the right schools: Kent School, Yale and the Yale Law school. He was a faithful deputy to the last generation of Democratic establishment figures.

Vance has been, in turn, a deputy to Averell Harriman, Robert McNamara and Dean Rusk, all of whom had some influence with President-elect Jimmy Carter during the selection process.

He was a member of Harriman's Paris negotiating team that failed to make any real progress on Vietnam. He was deputy secretary of defense and also served as secretary of the Army when Defense Secretary McNamara and his computers were running the Pentagon.

And Vance was a special negotiator for McNamara in Cyprus and South Korea.

The officials who have worked with him on these jobs, and respected him, now express doubts whether Mr. Nice Guy — who has always been No. 2 — is tough enough to master some of the diplomatic, bureaucratic and legislative opponents that a secretary of state must do battle with.

The hope of these officials is that Vance will be somewhere between a bland William P. Rogers and the domineering Kissinger.

Vance is married to the former Grace Sloane, and has four daughters and one son. He has been living in a gracious, old Fifth Avenue apartment and has been spending a great deal of time during the last few years trying to work out a solution to New York City's financial crisis.

He recently traveled to the Peoples Republic of China and has spent a lot of time on a United Nations association report which recommended that the United States and Soviet Union concentrate their disarmament efforts on that area where most money is spent, conventional rather than strategic armaments.

The Boy Scout Image Undergoes Marked Change in Recent Years

By UPI

John Peck is a large man with a steel-grey beard and blow-dried hair who looks so much like Boris Karloff he calls one of his bars in Orlando, Fla., "Boris." He is a hard-nosed Republican businessman and something of a man-about-town who hires topless dancers at another of his lounges.

To the amazement of his friends and customers, he never uses profane language, not even an occasional "damn" or "hell."

John Peck, age 44, is an Eagle Scout and proud of it. And with no embarrassment he traces his abhorrence of four-letter words to his boyhood in Rochester, N.Y., where he joined the Boy Scouts, worked for the merit badges to become an Eagle, once attended an international "jamboree" in France, and finally became an assistant scoutmaster.

"I just never felt the need to use profanity," he says. "Yes, I guess you could say it came from my days in the Boy Scouts."

Those were the days when boys too young to fight the Germans and the Japs went camping with GI mess kits, canteens, bayonets, ponchos and "shelter halves" brought home by brothers and uncles and fathers from Normandy, Iwo Jima and Anzio Beach.

Those were the days when the boys of Troop 14, Water Valley, Miss., would sit around the "Indian circle" at Camp Yocona while Scoutmaster Lawrence "Doc" Cox showed them how to make fire by spinning a stick with a bow against a log. He would tell them that such skills would help them "in later life," that far off time when they would drive their own tractors, run the Illinois Central trains between New Orleans and Chicago or become lawyers in Memphis.

Later, hidden in their pup tents, they would smoke cigarettes or grapevine and tell "dirty" jokes most of the night. It was a boy's world, full of innocence.

Every tenderfoot heard the old saw that you start a fire "by rubbing two Scouts together." But no one of that generation would have dreamed that one day a group of girl Explorer Scouts camping with Los Angeles policemen would really cause the sparks to fly.

But the 5.3 million members of the Boy Scouts of America in this Bicentennial year are doing much more than camping and helping old ladies across the street. For one thing, a Scout today may wear a skirt.

Three years ago girls were invited into the Explorer program for Scouts 15 to 20 years of age. Today, one third of the 483,000 Explorers are girls.

And their activities range from the courtroom to the cockpit of airplanes.

For example: In New Orleans, Explorer Post 549 recently staged a fashion show after its members learned something about merchandising and modeling under the sponsorship of a local department store.

In York, Pa., the Explorers took on the local district attorney in a mock trial and won the case, according to the jury.

In Knoxville, Tenn., the girls outnumber the boys in Post 113, which takes on such projects as clearing grazing land for cattle with chain saws and axes, surveying wildlife and providing feeding stations for birds.

"In a way, it's like a club," says Miss Becki Akers, outgoing president of the post. "But it's not a social club. We have a common interest in the outdoors."

Predictably, coed Scouting has brought on some problems.

Some have been minor: A mother writes the editors of "Exploring" magazine to complain that a recent issue featured on its cover a girl wearing a bikini top.

"I had to look twice to make sure the girl in the picture wasn't naked," she said.

Some have been scandalous: Sixteen officers of the Los Angeles police department's Hollywood division face disciplinary action for sexual hanky-panky involving girls of the Law Enforcement Explorer Group (LEEGS) who sometimes accompanied them on their beat to learn the skills of enforcing the law. "There was no rape, no seduction," one senior officer said. "There was a lot of agreement."

And some of Scouting's problems have had nothing to do with girls.

Last year Boy Scout councils in Chicago and several other cities were caught padding their rolls with the names of boys who did not exist.

And this fall in New Orleans a scoutmaster and two assistants were arrested on charges of operating a homosexual ring, processing film for homosexuals in more than 30 states. Police confiscated card files providing the names of more than 100 young boys, as well as pornographic snapshots and magazines.

While Boy Scout membership is at 5.3 million today, that is 9.1 per cent fewer than in 1974. But one official at the national headquarters in New Brunswick, N.J., says the roll-padding scandal is not the reason.

"The reason for the membership decline is a lot of things," said Mark R. Wille, news director for the ninth National Boy Scout Jamboree which will be held in Moraine State Park in Pennsylvania next year. "The scandal had a minimal effect."

Wille said that there are fewer boys these days and more competition for their time. Also he points to a "change in values," with many boys today considering uniforms to be "sissified."

While a number of girls have sued for the right to wear the uniform of a Boy Scout (not to be confused with an Explorer Scout), so far it's still an all-male organization.

The older boys in the Explorer posts (or ships) don't seem to mind having the girls around at all. In fact Mary Wright of Newton, Mass., was elected national president of the organization two years ago.

It's in Exploring that Scouting today differs so much from outdoor-oriented programs of the days of John Peck, who earned his merit badges hiking, cooking, tying knots and swimming.

The local posts may specialize in such activities as aviation, police work, medicine, communications, sailing, or a new law program organized with the help of the American Bar Association.

It was this quest for firsthand knowledge that led to the Los Angeles scandal. Several years ago girl Explorers began accompanying officers on their block patrols to learn crowd control and other police tactics. According to reports, that led to a co-ed camping trip.

Then following a month-long investigation, Daryl Gates,

Los Angeles' assistant police chief, announced in September that 16 policemen in the Hollywood division face criminal charges for becoming sexually involved with at least six of the LEEGS girls.

The investigation was launched when one Scout complained that the weekends had turned into sex orgies.

In an unfortunate choice of words, one Scout official said Exploring offers a "hands-on experience."

Scientists' Deeper Probes into Man's Origins Showing Results

By UPI

Archaeologists are digging farther into the early roots of modern man, pushing back the record on his prehistoric development in East Africa and China and unearthing previously unknown civilizations in Syria and South America. The scientists are now arguing that modern man is much older and sophisticated civilizations were developed much earlier than previously believed.

And the so-called New World may not be nearly so new.

Archaeologists armed with new dating techniques believe they have found traces of man dating back to 70,000 B.C. in southern California.

Another discovery of early metal alloys and pottery in Thailand challenges the generally held view that the Middle East was the "cradle of civilization."

"They're pushing man back further and further," said George Stuart, the National Geographic Society's staff archeologist. "Things are just happening all over the place. It's fantastic."

The archeological work is focusing on the entire gamut of man's development — how he evolved from ape-like primates, migrated around the world and then built sophisticated civilizations.

"The stuff has been coming in so fast that even articles I wrote last spring are out of date," said Richard MacNeish, director of the Robert S. Peabody Foundation for Archeology in Amherst, Mass.

Among the more fascinating theories and discoveries:

• The "missing link" between modern man and his more primitive ancestors has been found in Tanzania.

• A new Yuanmo man has been found in China that is one million years older than the earliest man previously identified in Asia.

• Asians migrated across a now-submerged land bridge and settled down the New World more than 20,000 years ago.

• The Incas of South America borrowed their architectural skills from an earlier undiscovered civilization called the Mollo people.

• A previously undiscovered civilization in Syria called the Ebla kingdom rivaled the empires of Egypt and Mesopotamia.

Most scientists agree that the earliest primate originated in eastern Africa, between two and five million years ago. But there has been only sketchy clues as to when modern man using tools and fire emerged.

In August, Tanzanian officials reported that the skull of a creature, apparently a kind of missing link between modern man and his primitive predecessors, had been found at Lake Ndutu in northern Tanzania.

"The cranium is remarkable in that it seems to form an evolutionary link between (Peking man) and homo sapiens (humans) having features in common with both," one official said.

The Ndutu man was found near bones at least 500,000 years old, indicating that modern man appeared in eastern Africa about that time.

Although Western scientists are searching East Africa for the earliest traces of modern man, Chinese scientists say they have discovered a man using tools and fire more than a million years before the earliest man so far detected in Asia.

Chinese scientists have found teeth and stone implements proving that the Yuanmo man lived in what is now Yunnan Province in southwest China 1.7 million years ago, the New China News Agency said July 26.

"This dating pushes the age of the earliest apeman discovered in China back more than one million years," the official news agency said.

"It can be seen that the Peking ape was already a relatively advanced man," said an article in Red Flag Magazine, the theoretical journal of Chinese Communism. "It is now established that a fairly long period of time separated the time the ape began to make tools from the 'Peking ape' in the evolution toward man."

Man's migration around the world, particularly to the New World, is also coming under particularly close scrutiny.

Scientists believe they have just pieced together a picture of how man migrated across a land bridge from what is now Siberia to Alaska, migrated southward and established sophisticated civilizations when he reached Mexico and Peru.

The University of Toronto's William Irving announced in September that he had found a human jaw bone at least 20,000 years old, as well as bone tools up to 29,000 years old, near the Old Crow River in the Yukon Territory.

Scientists expect to find much older signs of these immigrants in Alaska, particularly since traces of man have been found near La Jolla, Calif. dating back to 70,000

The National Geographic Society and the National Park Service have launched a $600,000 three-year effort to search an Alaskan valley 75 miles south of Fairbanks for the earliest signs of man in the New World.

The immigrants who began moving southward were surprisingly developed, according to two anthropologists at the Memorial University of Newfoundland.

James A. Tuck and Robert J. McGhee, writing in the November Scientific American, said they have found an ancient burial mound along the Quebec-Labrador border — a sign of a certain level of cultural stability.

"It comes as a surprise to learn...that the earliest burial mounds known anywhere in the world were built more than 7,000 years ago not by some settled, well-off people but by bands of Archaic Indians," they said.

It was not until they reached the warm climate of Mexico and South America around 300 B.C. that these immigrants developed agricultural skills, giving birth to the great Aztec, Mayan and Incan civilizations, scientists now believe.

The roots of these cultures has been lost in antiquity until recently.

But ruins near La Paz, Bolivia, opening to the public for the first time Nov. 28, reveal a culture using the trapezoidal shape in its architecture that predates the Incan empire, said Carlos Ponce Sangines, national director of archeology.

The Mollo culture is believed to have flourished in the Andes between the 13th and 15th centuries before the Incas, or "Children of the Sun," assembled their vast kingdom, Ponce said.

The trapezoid — until now considered an Inca innovation — is found widely in the magnificent Inca structures, many built with massive fitted stones that have puzzled archeologists for centuries.

Another "lost civilization" has just been uncovered in northern Syria, which has long been dismissed as a peripheral land of nomads without culture or commerce.

Italian archeologists led by Rome University's Paolo Matthiae have found nearly 15,000 tablets in the royal palace of the previously unknown Ebla kingdom. The tablets, covering events from 2500 B.C. to 2400 B.C., were written in a script similar to Biblical Hebrew, which developed several hundred years later.

Matthiae said the tablets were "evidence of the existence of a new world that rivaled the ancient kingdoms of Egypt and Mesopotamia" and provide an "important new chapter in the history of the world."

But one find in Thailand has posed a direct challenge to scientists who believe the great civilizations of the Middle East were the birthplace of culture.

The discovery of pottery and bronze — an alloy of tin and copper — at Ban Chiang, Thailand dating back to 3,600 B.C. "challenges all assumptions that have long been held about the development of our modern cultures," one American official said.

The pottery is believed to be 600 years older than similar work in the Tigris-Euphrates Valley — showing that Asia may have given pottery making and metal working skills to the Middle East, not vice versa.

Decision Soon on Milk Price

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Agriculture Department sources say the agency may decide by mid-December whether to make any change in the government's support price for milk in the quarter beginning Jan. 1.

An official queried about the outlook said he couldn't predict what the outgoing Ford administration would decide. But although dairy farmers are asking for an increase, one observer pointed out that if officials continue the policy of the past two years a hike is unlikely.

Currently, the department supports the price of manufacturing-grade milk at $8.26 per hundredweight. Spokesmen for the National Milk Producers Federation said they have asked the agency to raise the floor to $8.41. Since market prices for manufacturing milk averaged $8.54 in mid-November, the federation said the support floor could be raised with little or no impact on current consumer prices. The chief effect of the raise would be to cushion an expected seasonal decline in farm prices next spring.

Federation spokesmen said farmers need the support increase because producers in many dairy areas are facing increased feed costs in the wake of drought-reduced 1976 hay crops. In some cases, officials said farmers have already used much of the forage which normally would be fed to cattle later in the winter.

Replacing the forage supplies will be costly and may lead to cuts in milk production, the federation said.

Agriculture Department officials are currently conducting a quarterly review of dairy supports. The first step—receiving public comment on the issue—ended Tuesday. A spokesman said reviews of the comments and the economic outlook could produce a decision by mid-month.

Prospects for approval of an increase, meanwhile, were clouded by the fact that the department for most of the past two years has followed a policy of tying milk supports to 80 per cent of the "fair" parity price.

That policy was followed in boosting supports to $8.13 per hundredweight last April 1 and again to $8.26 on Oct. 1, following the last quarterly review. If it is followed again, there would be no hike on Jan. 1 because 80 per cent of parity currently is 13 cents below the $8.26 support price.

The parity figure changes from month to month with changes in a government index of farm costs. Reductions in the cost index in recent months produced a situation in which it took only $8.13 to equal 80 per cent of parity on Dec. 1 in contrast to the $8.26 needed a few months ago.

A department official queried about the possibility of reducing the milk support on Jan. 1 if experts estimate that 80 per cent of parity then would be below the current support, said the agency has never previously reduced a farm support price during a marketing year. The dairy marketing year runs through next March 31.

Dr. Britten to Speak On Mastitis Control

KINGSTON — Dr. Allan Britten, DVM, field veterinarian, New York State College of Veterinary Medicine, will discuss recommendations for mastitis control procedures that can be used on the dairy farm as well as more extensive use of lab and consultant services of the New York State Mastitis Control Program at 8 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 9, at the Ulster County Cooperative Extension office, 74 John Street, Kingston.

Cooperative Extension Agent Harold Hogan notes that Dr. Britten has just begun work at the Regional Mastitis Control Laboratory, 88 Prince Street, Kingston, and that the meeting will give area dairymen a good chance to get acquainted with him.

Hogan also announced that the Field Crop Recommends for 1977 are available at the John Street office and will also be available at the meeting. Copies go free to all farmers enrolled in the Extension Association.

Farmland Mapped

In its bid to preserve prime farmland and slow the urban sprawl to a crawl, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has begun an inventory of certain counties throughout the United States. Prime farmland is defined as land best suited for producing feed, food, forage, fiber and oilseed crops.

In 1976, 122 counties in 46 states are being inventoried, while 154 more counties are scheduled for 1977.

Most of the counties are under urban development pressure. By 1980 it is hoped that 1,200 counties will have been analyzed and color maps published. Each county map shows the location of prime farmland, additional farmland of state or local importance (its geographic characteristics make it less than prime) and unique farmland.

Farm Prices Continue Mixed Trend for Week

NEW YORK CITY — Northeast farm market prices continued on a mixed trend during the week ending Nov. 26, reports the Agricultural Marketing Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Produce shipping point prices were unchanged to higher, while poultry products brought steady to lower prices. Livestock and meat products were both up and down, while eggs and dairy products were generally steady.

Area fruit and vegetable trading at shipping points was moderate for the week. Demand for Long Island, as well as western and central New York potatoes was moderate at steady prices. Massachusetts cranberries and New York cabbage were priced higher, while New York onion and apple prices were unchanged.

Cartons of 12 three-pound bags of New York apples ranged from $5.75 to $6.50 for McIntosh and $6 to $6.50 for Red Delicious. In New York, cabbage brought $4 to $4.25 per 50-pound carton, while yellow onions were priced at $3.40 to $3.55 per 50-pound sack.

New York honey trading was moderate. Bulk sales of unprocessed honey of mixed flowers, amber to light amber color, brought 40 cents per pound. Imported honey trading was light.

The market tone for eggs was steady but cautious throughout the week. Supplies moved from fully adequate to occasionally short of full needs as pre-Thanksgiving buying stimulated demand. Prices to retailers, sales to volume buyers delivered store door were as follows: large, 80.5 to 82 cents a dozen; mediums 77 to 78 cents.

Buying interest was light for broiler-fryers as dealers focused their attention on traditional holiday items. Stocks remained restricted at the distributive level, but were adequate for the lighter call. Prices for immediate delivery, including multiple-drop shipment to the New York City area on U.S. Grade A, were steady at 35 to 36 cents a pound.

Chicken parts prices in New York were lower on breasts, while unchanged on legs and wings. Offers were fully sufficient for an unaggressive buying interest.

Trading on carlot and trucklot young turkeys, U.S. Grade A frozen, FOB New York, were as follows: hens, 49 to 50 cents; 14 to 22 pound toms, 52 cents. The market was well cleared on most sizes of toms. Hens were adequate with movement ranging from only fair to occasionally good.

Milk production held relatively steady throughout the east with minor fluctuations both up and down in scattered areas. Fluid supplies for Class I needs were about adequate early in the week but often excessive after midweek. Diversion of surplus to manufacturing plants ranged from light to heavy, with the heaviest volume over the Thanksgiving period.

The call for spot shipments of Class I milk started at good levels, but fell off sharply by midweek. Demand for bottled milk from retail outlets was good prior to Thanksgiving and slower following the holiday.

Cottage cheese sales were mostly good. Interest in condensed skim milk was seasonally good. Interest in spot sales of cream continues slow as most operations separated enough for their own needs.

A few ice cream plants were closed this week to reduce their present inventories. Ice cream consumption was seasonally low. Sour cream and cream cheese sales were good to very good. Excess cream clearing to the churns was light early in the week, but increased considerably as the week progressed.

Northeastern livestock and meat prices were generally mixed. At 12 upstate New York auctions, slaughter steers sold at 50 cents to $1 higher, and in instances $1.50 lower. Utility cows were $1 to $3 higher. Choice vealers ranged from steady to $2 lower, while high standard to good vealers were steady.

On the east coast, choice steer beef closed 50 cents to $1.50 lower. Utility cow beef was steady to $1.50 higher.

Standing inside his plastic covered grain bin, farmer Dan Ponder of Tuscola, Ill., examines a handful of corn being slowly dried by solar heat. Ponder first painted the bin black, then covered it with clear plastic wrap, leaving a three-inch gap for the warm air to collect. "As the cost of gas and electricity goes up, this becomes a more feasible method of drying grain," Ponder said.

Sisler, Longo Head Cornell Dairy Days

ITHACA — The annual Cornell Dairy Days will be held Tuesday, Jan. 11, and Wednesday, Jan. 12, in Morrison Hall, on the campus of Cornell University in Ithaca.

Keynote speakers for Tuesday's 1 p.m. opening session are Louis P. Longo, dairy farmer and president of Yankee Milk Inc., who will discuss "How Can Northeast Dairyman Continue to Compete?" and Prof. Daniel G. Sisler, department of agricultural economics, Cornell University, whose topic will be "Impact of World Feed Grain Supplies on the Dairy Industry."

An afternoon of feature presentations will be followed by a 6 p.m. social hour and a banquet at 7.

Wednesday's program features three concurrent sessions from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., a lunch break, and further feature presentations from 1 to 4 p.m.

Feature presentations include intestinal parasites, type, production and stayability, monthly cash flow planning, reducing seasonal fluctuations in milk production, economic analysis of complete feed sessions, cutting costs of cleaning milking equipment, what can be expected from automated equipment, storage system, manure's real value, calf-rearing problems, and open forums on herd health, genetics, reproduction, nutrition and mastitis, in which dairymen are urged to bring questions for discussion with the college faculty and other dairymen.

Registration forms may be obtained from Cornell Dairy Days, Morrison Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca N.Y. 14853. The early registration deadline is Jan. 1. A $7 fee for late registration will be charged after that date.

Dickson Named Professor

GENEVA — Dr. Michael H. Dickson has been promoted to professor in the Department of Seed and Vegetable Sciences at Cornell University's New York State Agriculture Experiment Station.

Dickson joined the Geneva Station faculty in 1964 as an assistant professor in the Department of Vegetable Crops and was promoted to associate professor with tenure in 1969.

Since 1972, Dickson has been cooperating with a station entomologist to identify and breed cabbage looper and cabbage worm resistance in the brassicas. The two scientists are also searching for resistance to seed corn maggot in beans.

In addition to his research duties, Dickson is chairman of the Bean Improvement Cooperative, an international organization of bean breeders and seedsmen. He is the station representative on the technical committee coordinating the USDA plant introduction program in the northeastern states, and he served as chairman of the Plant Breeding Subcommittee of the Vegetable Research Steering Committee for the northeastern states.

Dickson received his B.S. degree from MacDonald College in Canada and his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from Michigan State University. He spent six years in the Department of Horticulture at the University of Guelph before coming to Geneva in 1964. He and his wife Jean and three daughters live on White Springs Lane in the Town of Geneva.

Peace Corps Veterans Take Look Back at 15 Years in Philippines

MANILA, The Philippines (UPI) — Jim Turner remembers the speeches and ceremonies that greeted him and his fellow volunteers 15 years ago when they stepped off the plane and into the sweltering heat of the tropics.

Turner was a member of the first group of American Peace Corps volunteers assigned to the Philippines. Following the speeches and welcoming parties, the group of 128 spread out over the archipelago of more than 7,000 islands, mostly teaching English and quickly learning the realities of poverty.

"It was a hell of a job we tried to do," said Turner, 38, a native of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. "We came in to work miracles, and I guess some of us worked them. Mostly, though, we just tried to survive."

Unlike most of the other volunteers, Turner stayed on after his two-year stint and has since become a successful businessman in the Philippines.

He has interests in two bar-restaurants in the Manila tourist belt and works for a large business firm with wide-ranging projects throughout the country. He also has taught political science in one of Manila's universities.

The Peace Corps, on the other hand, has had a much more difficult time justifying its continuing presence in developing nations of the world. John F. Kennedy first formally proposed the creation of an American overseas volunteer force in a speech near the end of the 1960 presidential election campaign.

Kennedy told a San Francisco audience he wanted an American Peace Corps to thwart the propaganda efforts of the Soviet Union in developing nations.

The Kennedy proposal ignited an altruistic blaze in the hearts of the nation's youth and drew sympathetic support from a Cold War-conscious electorate.

Less than a year after Kennedy's election, the first of some 60,000 volunteers went off to developing countries in Asia, Africa and South America, certain only of a desire to "do something."

"The 350 volunteers here have a fairly small effect in the overall sense, which may be improved with recruitment of more specialized people," says Marsh Thomson, director of the Philippine Peace Corps program, largest in the world today.

The jobs given the early volunteers, who first had to survive rugged physical training and crash courses in some of the world's more obscure languages, consisted primarily of English language teaching and vaguely defined community development assignments in remote areas.

"Hell, everyone used to take for granted that we were here for a two-year vacation," said one former female volunteer at the Manila anniversary celebration which coincided with the arrival of the 100th group sent to the Philippines. She asked not to be identified.

"You come into this isolated little barrio (village) and everyone thinks you're either nuts for giving up a comfortable life in the states or just a CIA snooper compiling data on them. How can you achieve anything in a setup like that?"

"After awhile, I just sat back and waited out the two years, smiling as much as I could and counting the days."

The community development projects are still there, but Thomson notes the education programs have been eliminated in a major emphasis shift within the last five years.

Trying to shed its liberal arts education image, the Peace Corp now aims its recruitment campaigns at farmers, mechanics, nurses and people with advanced training in agronomy, urban planning and medicine.

"We've succeeded in converting entirely to food production, health programs, nutrition, research areas in technical fields and development planning," Thomson says. "We get into education (in the Philippines) only in specialized areas such as work with the blind and deaf."

Getting Congress to approve Peace Corps budgets, however, has never been easy.

For the more conservative politicians, the Peace Corps, especially during the Vietnam war years, remained a liberal scheme and haven for draft dodgers.

tions had requested the Peace Corps to leave their countries and a number of others wanted its presence considerably reduced. Since then, several more countries have asked the Peace Corps to leave. In 1971, former President Richard Nixon decided to revitalize the waning popularity of the Peace Corps by lumping it with six other federally funded volunteer agencies into a super corps called "Action". Five years later the conglomerate appears to be healthy. With the end of the Vietnam War, and perhaps as a result of the ensuing domestic economic difficulties, the Peace Corps appears now on the verge of a rejuvenation.

By early 1976, there were nearly 8,000 volunteers and trainees overseas. More importantly, Peace Corps officials claim applications from wouldbe volunteers are rising sharply to about 30,000 per year compared with 19,000 in 1970. To add to the optimism, President-elect Jimmy Carter's mother, "Miz Lillian," has become the most famous Peace Corps "alumna." She joined the Peace Corps 10 years ago at the age of 68 and spent two years in India working in health centers.

Good Luck, Billy

Billy Carter held a barbecue at his gas station in Plains, Ga., on Saturday and President-elect Jimmy Carter, his older brother, dropped by to wish Billy luck in the mayoral election to be held Monday. Here one of Billy's friends gives the president-elect a piece of barbecue chicken.

Far Behind Pace of Nixon, JFK, Ike

Carter Taking Transition Slowly

AMERICUS, Ga. (UPI) — Jimmy Carter's preparations for assuming the presidency seem leisurely compared to the pace set by Richard Nixon or by John Kennedy or by Dwight Eisenhower.

Carter made his first two cabinet nominations Friday and said he hopes to have his full Cabinet "fairly well identified by Christmas." And he has made one White House staff appointment, that of Press Secretary Jody Powell.

By contrast, Eisenhower completed selection of his cabinet and White House staff in November 1952, the same month as his election. Nixon announced his White House staff days after the 1968 election and presented all of his cabinet simultaneously on Dec. 11. Kennedy completed his Cabinet on Dec. 17, 1960.

Even in the traditional meetings between outgoing and newly elected presidents, Carter's scheduled has lagged. Eisenhower and Truman met Nov. 18, 1952. Kennedy met with Nixon, whom he defeated, within one week after the 1960 election and with Eisenhower, the outgoing president, on Dec. 6.

Nixon met with President Lyndon Johnson, whom he succeeded, within a week after the 1968 election. But Carter did not meet with Ford until Nov. 22.

Carter told reporters shortly after the November election that he would be "careful and thorough and deliberate" in making appointments.

In order not to appear "presumptuous," as Powell put it, Carter has limited his trips to Washington, where his mere presence steals the limelight from Ford.

Spending most of his time at home in Plains, Carter compensates by spending six or eight hours a day on the telephone, consulting contacts all over the nation on potential cabinet-level appointments.

Carter announced Friday he had chosen veteran eastern establishment trouble-shooter Cyrus Vance as secretary of state and Atlanta banker Thomas Bertram Lance, who once ran for Georgia governor, to head the Office of Management and Budget and help make good on campaign promises to cut the federal bureaucracy. He called both appointments "superlative."

Sloper Reviews: 'The Shrew'

By John T. Sloper

NEWBURGH—"The Taming of the Shrew" is probably most widely known in this country as the source material for the popular musical, "Kiss Me Kate"—Cole Porter's (with the Spewacks) sprightly romp through Baltimore and Padua.

Taking fewer liberties with Shakespeare's original comedy is the Young Vic Company of London, who stopped over at Mount Saint Mary College Cultural Center Thursday night as part of their first North American tour.

The liberties that were taken by the Young Vic were totally inoffensive and greatly aided the popular acceptance of the farce.

There were lines and bits of business that Shakespeare never conceived, but they all fitted perfectly into the spirit of the piece and added to the overall hilarity.

From the wholly-new treatment of the Induction scene, with its local references by a very modern Christopher Sly, to the use of tricks and bits of business from the Vaudeville and Burlesque of the 1920's, the show was a fast-paced, ribald and hilarious look at the war between the sexes that still maintains the integrity of the original.

That this youthful company could reach all levels of audience appeal without offending the traditionalists or turning off the sophisticates is due to several factors. While employing methods that require extreme control in timing and unified playing, they made it all seem natural and effortless. They could get away with almost anything because they are so professional—and without losing their enthusiasm.

The whole cast was so expert that it might be unfair to mention just the show-stoppers, but Peter O'Farrell as Tranio exhibited some of the fanciest footwork I've seen in years; Ian Trigger as Grumio was a perfect clown; but even these two were topped by the unlisted actor who played Christopher Sly—very silly. The rewrite, of course, gave the latter a distinct advantage.

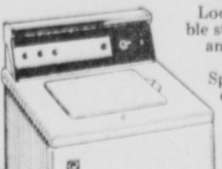

The pace was so fast that the lines were sometimes lost and occasionally the old rule of comedy that says a sight-gag won't work more than three times in a row was violated—but who cared? We were all having too much fun.

Our thanks to the Cultural Center at Mount Saint Mary for booking the production, and an expression of dismay been. Where were you Thursday seats than there should have evening?

The Paramount Goal of Planned Parenthood... Every Child Born Should Be Wanted and Loved

By MARGERY MOSSMAN
Freeman Staff

KINGSTON—Planned Parenthood was organized to protect children.

It was not developed to teach the public anything they shouldn't know about their bodies and themselves; nor was it developed to encourage sexual promiscuity.

The main goal of the local non-profit league, Planned Parenthood of Dutchess-Ulster, Inc., stems from its belief that "every child born should be wanted and loved." To this end, the volunteer organization now operates out of six locations, offering three major programs—clinical, outreach and educational—and providing full contraceptive and family planning services to all who are in need.

In Ulster County, Planned Parenthood operates clinics at 276 Fair St., Kingston, and 243 Main St., New Paltz. The Kingston office has been at its present location since February 1974, after functioning for awhile at Kingston Hospital Tumor Clinic. In its first 12 months, Planned Parenthood on Fair Street saw 568 patients. This year, Norma Johnson, Assistant Director of PP of Dutchess-Ulster, projects that the Kingston facility will see a total of 1112 patients, almost twice the number seen just two years ago.

Word is spreading quickly about Planned Parenthood. According to the new Executive Director, Steve White, the vast majority of new patients seen at all six facilities have been referred simply by word-of-mouth.

Women of all ages make appointments for PP clinics rather than regular doctor's office visits for a variety of reasons. Money is probably the largest factor. PP is not in competition with doctors. It is subsidized by the federal government, and no one is refused its services. Fees are based on a sliding scale depending on income, and all of PP's services are available to those on welfare and to those who are considered "medically indigent."

Planned Parenthood serves women regardless of age or marital status, and complete confidentiality is assured.

White believes many women come to the clinics because they prefer the atmosphere over that in a doctor's office. Patients need never feel alone and nervous in a clinic situation. The staff is relaxed and friendly, but each patient gets all the individual attention she needs. The "strong educational component" that is part of every visit is emphasized by the director. "We pride ourselves in the fact that we give complete information even when it's not specifically asked for, and we invite questions," says White.

Each PP facility schedules a number of clinics every month. It is during the clinics that patients have their medical examinations, often the only physical check-up they may have all year. Each patient is given a careful pelvic, rectal and breast examination, a pap test for cancer detection, a urinalysis, a test for gonorrhea, and a blood pressure check.

As necessary, following the examination, contraceptive counseling is offered. Patients are given information on all the types of birth control, and they, along with the physician, choose the method they feel will be best for them. Prescribed contraceptives are given to the women right at the clinic.

Two mornings a week, the Kingston facility offers pregnancy testing and counseling. Test results are known within 10 minutes after the patient is seen. Any patients who desire instructional counseling or referral service can do so during this visit.

At Planned Parenthood, all medical-clinical services are performed by licensed physicians, nurse midwives, or registered nurses specially trained in family planning medical techniques.

Both professionals and well-trained volunteers are always available to offer referrals for related services such as venereal disease treatment, Eileen Meltzer, RN, checks blood pressure of woman visiting Planned Parenthood office seeking information about the vital program.

Planned Parenthood serves women regardless of age or marital status, and complete confidentiality is assured....Other vital aspects of Planned Parenthood's many services are the outreach program and education.

voluntary sterilization for both men and women, prenatal and obstetric care, infertility problems, medical problems not related to birth control, and abortions.

The second aspect of Planned Parenthood's many services is the outreach program. This program is designed to reach those families in rural areas who have no access to or who are unaware of the facilities in Dutchess and Ulster counties. Outreach workers knock on doors throughout rural communities offering family planning literature and counseling to responsive families. When desired, these paraprofessional workers make referrals to PP facilities, and sometimes they even provide the women with transportation to clinics.

The aim of outreach is not only to promote birth control, but to insure a woman's health by encouraging her to come for a yearly check-up at a clinic.

Planned Parenthood's third component is a wide-ranging service that fits under the heading of "education." PP of Dutchess-Ulster has one full-time coordinator and a number of part-time educators who travel throughout both counties offering specialized presentations geared to a variety of audiences, including schools, community groups, correctional facilities, institutions for the physically or mentally handicapped, migrant groups, nursing classes, etc.

Educational programs usually involve the showing of a film, followed by discussion. Topics vary depending on the needs of the audience. Usual topics are over-population, human sexuality, family planning and birth control.

Planned Parenthood is currently working especially hard to get its educators into the high schools, where they are needed most. Although New York State now mandates sex education in the public schools, directors of PP are doubtful of the extent of these classes. The Kingston office is pleased to report that most area school districts are beginning to welcome PP educators, whose presentations supplement the schools' courses.

Kingston High School, however, has not heard any PP lectures, and this may be a severe mistake. From May 1974 to May 1975, 118 out of 330 pregnancy tests conducted by Kingston PP were for girls 19 years of age or younger. Of these girls, 43 percent were students in the Kingston Consolidated School District; and 69 percent of the 118 girls reported that they were not using any birth control.

These kind of statistics are what Planned Parenthood is striving to change. Bernice Rugenberg, former executive director of the Dutchess-Ulster organization, wrote, "PP believes that the sexual mores and customs of young people today are the result of many factors in our society, such as movies, TV, radio, general attitudes, permissiveness and vast cultural changes in the last two decades. This being the case, we believe that any sexually active individual has the right to obtain health care and protection against unwanted pregnancy and VD."

Planned Parenthood provides preventive health care. For every dollar of federal money spent this year, taxpayers will save two dollars next year, because fewer unwanted children will be born. There will be fewer births on Medicaid, fewer children on welfare, fewer children placed in foster care, and less money required for Aid to Dependent Children.

In addition, with the right care and proper birth control, the need for abortion can be greatly averted.

Before You Say 'I Do' ...Some Timely Tips For Would-Be Nuptials

KINGSTON—If you are in love and wondering how to get married, you should know that, although the path leading to and from the sacred aisle may be difficult, you can still obtain a marriage license with ease, if you're aware of the simple rules and regulations.

To begin, both the prospective bride and groom must have blood tests. It is suggested that these tests be done by a family doctor. Blood samples are sent by the doctor to a lab, which will furnish him with the test results within a few days. The physician then fills out standard forms for the engaged couple.

These blood test result forms are brought along on the couple's next stop—to the town or city clerk. It is imperative that both the woman and her fiancé go to the clerk's office together, or a license cannot be obtained. To issue a license, the clerk must see not only the blood test results, but also some form of positive identification for each person, such as a birth certificate, baptismal record or driver's license.

Once these various papers are approved, the couple can purchase a license. Fortunately, inflation has been soft on lovebirds—the cost of a marriage license has not changed in the last four years; and $4 is surely a small price to pay for a lifetime of happiness.

Obviously, obtaining a marriage license is not a terribly confusing process, however, there are, by law, time limits to the various steps between the blood test and the actual wedding date, which make it necessary for future husbands and wives to plan carefully.

They could be arguing about the wedding reception seating arrangements, or a variety of other key points in their advanced plans for the upcoming trip down the aisle.

For example, two people cannot be married until at least 10 days after their blood tests. They must also wait at least 24 hours after they have been issued a marriage license to be wed.

In addition, engaged couples should be aware that they must obtain their marriage licenses within 30 days after their blood tests. They also must be married within 60 days after issuance of the marriage license, or the license becomes invalid.

The marriage license must be issued in the state in which the couple plans to be married.

Kingston City Clerk, Louis F. DeCicco, advises that prospective marriage partners call or visit their city or town clerk as early as possible, in order to get complete information and avoid unnecessary disappointment later on in the process. All too often, said DeCicco, engaged couples are misled by friends and relatives who mean well, but simply aren't aware of the present regulations and special procedures that may be necessary in obtaining a marriage license.

If all these necessary items are planned for carefully in advance, then it should be clear sailing for that trip down the aisle.

Before the bride can let herself think of the big day itself, with the wedding ceremony, the wedding reception and the honeymoon as well as a full life with her new partner, there's a lot more to think about in advance -- the blood tests and marriage licenses.

Dear Abby

Older Folk Slip It to Their Guests

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The son of a wealthy professional man has gotten a girl pregnant. That may not be unusual, but the boy's father bought him a new car with the understanding that the boy not marry the girl. This I consider most unusual. The girl is forced to go on welfare. The cost of pre-natal care and delivery, plus the cost of raising the child, will be at the taxpayers' expense.

Hamlet Nursery Program

WEST HURLEY—The Children's Hamlet, the area's newest nursery school opening Jan. 10, invites all pre-schoolers and their parents to an Open House Sunday, Dec. 12, 2 p.m. to become acquainted with the pre-school facility and its staff.

The Children's Hamlet will offer a variety of expressive activities in its curriculum including dramatic arts, puppetry, arts, crafts, music, dance and movement, as well as, language and speech concepts. Both half-day and full-day programs are being offered.

The pre-school is located on the grounds of the Hamlet Theatre, Rte. 28A in West Hurley. For further information contact Dolores DiPucchio, certified teacher, at the Hamlet Theatre.

As a taxpayer I resent the idea of supporting the grandchild of a wealthy man. However, what do you advise in such a situation? The district attorney seems to feel that welfare is the answer.—DEE DEE ESS.

DEAR DEE: Pity a male who is old enough to become a father but isn't man enough to handle his own problems. The wealthy professional man who would bribe his son to forestall marriage, but then offer no financial help to the girl and/or the child is as morally guilty as the son for evading any responsibility for the consequences of his actions. To fill the gap created by such moral cop-outs, the U.S. government has created Aid to Dependent Children. And for the sake of the innocent children, it's a good thing it did.

DEAR ABBY: We are older people who have just bought a light-colored carpet. We cannot afford to replace it, so we have bought 10 pair of slippers for guests to put on before coming into our house.

The problem: We have a dear friend (he's also a relative) who refuses to remove his shoes and use the slippers we have provided for our guests. His wife still comes, using the slippers, but he refuses to come if he has to wear the slippers.

Please advise us.—MINUS ONE GUEST.
DEAR MINUS: Carpets, including light-colored ones, were made to walk on. If you want this uncooperative guest to visit you, make an exception to the rule and don't make a big deal out of it.

Not until one knows "the truth about himself, complete with all the grim hostilities, insecurities and unresolved conflicts, is he truly "free."

It is the role of the psychiatrist to remove the camouflage, self-deception and rationalizations, and to bring the unconscious conflicts into the conscious mind where reason can deal with them. Once reason is gained, the ure begins, because the truth does make one free.

Freeman Consumer Panel:

Yule Cakes Good, Others?

WOODSTOCK—Holidays bring much merriment to families as they both entertain and are entertained in the homes across the land. What to serve for all of those quick moments when company comes on the visiting rounds of friends and relatives.

On the table laden with decorative cookies, traditional sweets will probably be some of that old time favorite, fruit cake. There was a time when homemakers found it possible to prepare this delicacy with careful selection, cutting and measuring of the fruits and nuts. It was made ahead of time so all of those flavors could mellow into a prized confection. However, with today's mode of busy living, homemakers might decide that a purchased cake could substitute.

This week the Freeman Consumer Panel considered some of these cakes for holiday entertaining, and the reactions were not great.

WENDY REYNOLDS in Woodstock tried a real Southern fruit cake (with some thought that President-elect Jimmy Carter would be eating fruit cake during his festivities.) She found a cake baked by the Claxton Bakery Inc., Claxton, Ga., with pecans for nuts, (what could be more Southern), raisins, cherries, eggs, flour, pineapple and assorted fruits. It was a light cake shaped in a long square stick 2 inches square and just "perfect size for cocktail parties' finger food." She found it at Stewart's Ice Cream store for $1.79 and also at the Hurley Ridge Market for $1.49.

"I loved it," Wendy reported, "especially its pecans, it had oodles of fruit and nuts, was moist, very sweet." However, her husband and son thought it had too much fruit, too little cake. Husband said it tasted like "a lollipop."

GLORIA CASCIARO of Kingston had been chided for many years by her sister for spending foolish time and money to make her own fruit cake. She had been listening to her sister praise the A and P Chain, Jane Parker Fruit Cake, ever since the A and P store was located on Central Broadway across from the old post office.

"That is what I did! I bought a 1 lb. 8 oz. fruit cake, $2.79, and found it loaded with fruit and nuts. I think if I had not purchased all those things for my traditional cake, I would certainly serve Jane Parker's."

BEADETTE MORRIS in New Paltz has a family that does not like fruit cake so she thought of some other sweets to serve at Christmas time and appropriately chose the Entenmann Bakery fruit stollen "which we all enjoyed especially laden with oodles of butter."

"When it comes to baking, I am the world's worst, but I've found a good product, Pillsbury's Cranberry Bread Mix. It's easy to fix, 1-2-3 and it is in the oven. It doesn't take hours to prepare and serve it warm. I've a couple of boxes on hand for the holidays."

EMILY SPADA in Saugerties was amazed to find so many people who dislike fruit cake because it is too rich and her family is no exception to that. She tried Shirley Jean Fruit Cake, 1 1/2 lb., found on sale for 99 cents at Mack Drugs. It was not "too rich, however; I was disappointed that there were no nuts in it."

"At our house it has become a tradition that I bake an applesauce cake and add the candied fruit and plenty of nuts. I doubt that I would purchase this item again."

Two weeks from today our consumer testing panel will judge the relative merits of Rose Milk Lotion, the lotion which is being featured in so many places this fall. With all of the early cold weather, it would be interesting to hear the thoughts on a suitable lotion for dry skin.

AALTJE RICHTER

Easy Dutch Candy Recipes

Two easy Dutch candy recipes are suggested for tonight, Sinterklaas Eve, by Mrs. Willem (Aaltje) Richter of High Woods who came to America from Holland in 1963. Aaltje and Willem were married here by Dominie Arthur E. Oudemool at the Old Dutch Church and are the parents of Judith, age 8, and Mark, age 6. She loves to sew for her home and family but to celebrate the St. Nicholas Eve, she would choose:

CHOCOLADE BORSTPLAAT

1 cup sugar
1/4 cup cocoa
4 tblspns. water or 5 cookie forms, open style
Mix cocoa and sugar together, add water and bring to a slow boil. Let cook until the last drop falling from the spoon is like a string. Cool, stirring once in a while until setting occurs around the edges. Pour into buttered forms which are placed on wax paper. Makes wafer candies. Cool and remove forms.

CHOCOLADE TRUFFELS

1/4 cup cocoa
3/4 cup confectionery sugar
1/2 cup butter
1/4 cup chocolate sprinkles
Soften butter in bowl. Blend in the cocoa and confectionery sugar with a fork until a solid mass occurs. Make small balls and roll them through the chocolate sprinkles. For rum truffles, substitute 4 tablespoons rum for cocoa.

Handel's 'Messiah' Set For West Hurley Church

WOODSTOCK—A performance of Handel's "The Messiah", adhering as closely as possible to the arrangement used in the first performance at Dublin in 1742, will be given at St. John's Church, off Rte. 375, West Hurley, Saturday, Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. Henry Sykes, choirmaster of St. Gregory's Church in Woodstock, has assembled a group of vocalists and instrumentalists for this presentation.

Sponsored by the Woodstock Clergy Association, all proceeds will go to the Meals-on-Wheels in the Woodstock Area. Tickets may be purchased at Abram's Music Store in Kingston, Montano's Shoe Store in Saugerties, the Woodstock Sound Center, or at the door.

One of the greatest musical masterpieces, "The Messiah" has seen many changes over the past two centuries in size of chorus, vocal style, orchestration. To recapture the spontaneity, characteristic of soloists in Handel's Time, the soloists under Henry Sykes' direction have been encouraged to add embellishment where appropriate. Orchestral instrumentation will include violins, viola, cello, bass, oboe, bassoon, trumpets, timpani and harpsichord continuo as scored by Handel, in contrast to the traditional scoring of the piece as done by Mozart. Sykes, who will direct, is a member of the Mid-Hudson Madrigal Society and past member of the Ulster County Board of The Hudson Valley Philharmonic Society.

Along with the chorus of approximately 40, featured soloists will be: Kenneth

BACKYARD OBSERVER

Holiday Highlights from Summer

By JEAN DOLAN

Festive times are upon us. Thanksgiving signaled the start of the season of entertaining, guaranteed to chase the winter blues away until at least the second of January.

Summer flea market foraging has given an able assist to our holiday meals, and year around entertaining for that matter.

Flea markets are just fun places to be on a summer Sunday. The air is light, the pressures minimal and the merchandise kooky to cute and back to practical. Somehow Deanna Durbin paperdolls and Reader's Digest condensed books are not my thing but amid the clutter of old clothes on racks in the sun and the junky trappings of the 30s, there can be a find to delight, making the whole afternoon worth the trip.

A year ago I was making the rounds of offerings at an area flea market, spotted a wooden bowl used to display some nothing jewelry and managed to make a very suitable transaction.

The wooden bowl turned out—after applications of soap and water and warm mineral oil—to be a gem of an old chopping utensil. It was rich in patina and glowing with the oil applications.

Teamed with a tripod stand from another home attic or cellar—I have forgotten now what it's origins were—the bowl has become a permanent companion for the dining room table.

As an auxiliary server, it doubles as a salad bowl, fruit and nut bowl or dried flower holder, all of which complement the groaning board or table in repose.

The stand, it should be noted, is a fine example of Victorian craft. Rope and reed turk's hats, curlicues and pineapples are employed in its design, all varnished in the dark manner typical of the period.

Another summer foray which has enhanced the holiday season is the lucky find of "D" monogrammed linens at an area antique establishment. The earlier needlecrafter who painstakingly embroidered versions of the initial into tablecloths, napkins and dresser scarfs may not have had have had my name in mind but the result is personal and attractive.

I guess the moral to the story is that beauty is where you find it and you can recycle that "old stuff" to your own uses—even that frayed velvet coat with the gold braid trim on the sun-drenched piperack if that is your druthers.

Meanwhile, the bowl is shined, the nuts and fruit are on hand for holiday callers and the linens pressed and ready for the table.

In Celebration of Winter

The celebration of winter becomes more popular in Canada every year. In addition to crisp air, bright skies and sparkling snow, Canada boasts a wide range of winter events and attractions including sophisticated cities and unexcelled sports facilities. For this youngster just the winter woods and his togoggan are attraction enough.

South Korea Has Cut-Rate Tours

TOKYO (UPI) — Kang Ja Kil, a Korean who runs a gas station in Tokyo, went on a 10-day group tour of South Korea at the astonishingly low price of $333.

It was a bargain — the round trip air fare from Tokyo to Seoul alone is $228, and Korean hotels are not cheap.

The tour was subsidized by supporters of South Korea in Japan. Kang was invited for an odd reason: he was a known and active sympathizer of communist North Korea. So were the others in his tour.

About 650,000 Koreans live in Japan. The two Koreas have competed fiercely for their loyalties ever since Korea was partitioned at the end of World War II.

Since last summer, Japan's pro-South Korea association, called Mindan, has been offering cut-rate tours of South Korea to members of its rival, a pro-North Korean group called Chosen Soren.

By mid-summer on this year, 7,000 Koreans had taken up Mindan's offer. Long-term loans are offered people with low incomes who want to go.

Koreans live all over Japan, a legacy of Japan's colonial rule of their country from 1910-1945. Through them runs a barrier Koreans call "the invisible 38th parallel," after the truce line laid down across Korea after the 1950-53 Korean War.

Loyalty to North or South Korea divide neighbor and even families.

North Korea's Chosen Soren claims 300,000 followers, possibly the largest minority in any private enterprise country giving allegiance to a Communist nation. It publishes a newspaper and runs a private school system for about 40,000 students, including a college.

It also operates credit unions and finances small businessmen — a valuable service in Japan where Koreans have trouble getting bank credit.

South Korea's Mindan also claims about 300,000 supporters and offers similar services.

"We don't demand that people who take the trip quit Chosen Soren," says Kang in Whon, director of organization for Mindan, and no relation to the service station operator. "There is no political pressure. We just want to counter the other side's stories that South Korea is backward and impoverished. If the people want to stay in Chosen Soren, that's fine."

Kang's decision to accept

Mindan's hospitality made him a pawn in the struggle. He was an officer in a chamber of commerce sponsored by Chosen Soren for Korean businessmen in his part of Tokyo.

Besides the gas station he owns a small restaurant. He financed them with loans totaling $100,000 from a North Korean credit union. In return, he went to regular study sessions on the thoughts of North Korean President Kim Il Sung, and took part in mass meetings when asked.

"First they (Chosen Soren) tried to talk me out of going," Kang says. "Then they called in my loans and demanded immediate repayment. Then they even asked my friends to stop associating with me."

Mindan came to Kang's rescue. They got him to join a South Korean credit union, and arranged a loan from a Japanese bank to help pay off the North Korean loan.

Your Social Security

Earnings Test Is Necessary

KINGSTON—The Social Security Administration is asking for comments by the public on the question of how much information should be disclosed from social security records, according to George J. Habernig, manager of the Kingston social security office.

Habernig said that the agency needs to change its regulations governing disclosure of information to make them conform with the Privacy Act, the Freedom of Information Act, and the new Government in the Sunshine Act.

"An important issue underlying these laws is the basic conflict between the public's right to know and the right of privacy of people whose records are kept by Social Security," Habernig said. "We will need to resolve that conflict in our regulations and we want the public's help."

The Social Security Administration published a "Notice of Intent" in the Nov.

22, 1976 Federal Register, social security office, 57 Albany Ave., Habernig said. Single copies of the notice are available at the Kingston Interested persons have un-

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. I will retire from my job on March 31, 1977, when I will be 65. My earnings will be $5,000. How will this effect my social security payments?

A. Although your earnings will exceed the $3,000 allowable for 1977 you will be entitled to a social security check for each month beginning April, 1977 if earnings are $250 per month or less April through December.

Q. In 1976 I received social security checks each month and I also worked part time. I now realize that I have earned more than the $2,760. What should I do?

A. You should notify the social security office immediately and give them an estimate of what your total earnings for the year will be. On or before April 15, 1977, you should file an annual report of your 1976 earnings with the social security office. Any overpayment will be recovered from any benefits due you in 1977.

Q. I will be 65 in February, 1977, and I do not expect to retire. How do I get Medicare coverage?

A. You should get in touch with your social security office before February and file an application for social security benefits. This application will entitle you to Medicare. No benefits will be paid if you are going to continue to work after age 65 until such time as you decide to retire.

til Jan. 6, 1977, to submit their comments. They may mail their comments to Commissioner of Social Security, PO Box 1585, Baltimore, Md., 21203.

After the Social Security Administration has considered the letters it has received and the results of public hearings it will hold in San Francisco, Kansas City, Mo., and Philadelphia, the agency will publish proposed regulations on disclosure information.

The public will again have an opportunity to comment on the proposed regulations before they become final.

Until now, the Social Security Administration has asked for public comments only after publishing proposed regulations. The "Notice of Intent" reflects a new priority to assure that the public has an opportunity to take part in the formulation of policy at an earlier stage.

..And It's All Your Fault

My son slouched into the kitchen last night, threw his books on the countertop and said, "I've just had the worse day of my entire life and it's all your fault!"

"How do you figure that?" I asked.

"Just because you made me go back up to my room and turn off all the lights before I went to school, I missed the bus. Then, with all your nagging about cleaning up my room, I couldn't find my gym clothes and got 15 points knocked off my grade."

"The gym clothes were folded and in your bottom drawer."

"Yeah, well, what yo-yo would expect them to be there?"

"You've got a point."

"I hope you're happy," he grumbled. "I have failed English."

"I did that?"

"That's right. I told you I had a paper that was due before lunch and you made me turn my lights off last night and wouldn't let me do it."

"It was 1:30 in the morning."

"Just forget it. It's done. Did you have a good lunch today?"

"I hope so because thanks to you, I didn't get any."

"What's THAT got to do with me?"

"You're the one who wouldn't advance me next week's allowance. And more good news. You know the suede jacket you got me for my birthday last year? Well, it's gone."

"And I'm to blame for that?"

"I'm glad you admit it. All

I hear around here is, 'Hang up your coat, hang up your pajamas, hang up your sweater' ... and the one time I take your advice and hang up my jacket on a hook in the lunchroom, someone rips it off. If I had just dropped it on the floor by my feet like I always do, I'd have that suede jacket today."

"It sounds like quite a day."

"It's not over yet," he said. "Didn't you forget something?"

"Like what?" I asked.

"Like weren't you supposed to remind me I had ball practice after school?"

"I put a note on your desk."

"Under all that junk I'm supposed to find a note! It would serve you right if I got cut. And I might just do that. I swear, I was talking to some of the guys and we decided parents can sure screw up their kids."

I smiled. "We try."

Currency Troubles Almost Worldwide

Britain Becomes Bargain Basement

By UPI

Britain, whose pound sterling was once the mightiest currency in the world, has become the "bargain basement of Europe" because of its cheap prices.

Italy's lira is still known as the "sick old man of Europe." Japan's yen is called "a time bomb" and recent devaluations in Australia, Mexico, Canada and other nations has left the world's monetary system in chaos.

The currencies of many nations — notably Britain and Italy — have lost sharply against the monetary systems of stronger nations without formal devaluations.

International economists say the rash of currency adjustments is a reaction to high inflation rates in certain countries, like Britain, as well as political developments that shake investors' confidence in a nation's future.

Although most deny that the world's monetary system is breaking down, they say that currency shakeups are likely to continue as long as inflation and political turmoil continue.

In technical terms, the major non-Communist nations of the world abandoned a fixed rate system and adopted a method of floating rates at conferences in Rambouillet, France, and Jamaica.

Now, a debate is raging as to whether this floating rate system is working. Some critics charge that the system is in a "shambles" and is contributing to turbulence on foreign exchange markets.

But others, notably Treasury Secretary William Simon, maintain it will work if members simply put their individual economies on a sound footing.

One of the major threats to the floating system, according to American economists, has been Japan's insistence on maintaining the yen at an artificially low rate to make its exports more competitive.

Mass Planned at Grotto of the Nativity

In Bethlehem on the day before Christmas, a procession of clergymen slowly makes its way into Manger Square after a 10-mile walk from Jerusalem. More than 20,000 tourists will visit the tiny city to witness this traditional ceremony.

BETHLEHEM, Israeli-occupied Jordan (UPI) — One hundred and twenty six years ago, Russia went to war with Britain, France and Turkey. One of the reasons was a dispute between Czarist Russia and Turkey over guardianship of the traditional birthplace of Jesus.

Christians get along better now than they did before the Crimean War, but rival priests still keep an eye on one another at the Grotto of the Nativity.

The Greek Orthodox sect controls the hulking, fourth-century basilica that covers the underground cave believed to be the birthplace of Jesus.

Their Christmas falls in January, but the grotto itself is shared with the Latin-rite Catholics. Franciscan fathers stage an elaborate celebration starting with midnight mass on the eve of Dec. 25.

It is preceded by a parade of priests and acolytes from Jerusalem, to the north, led by the patriarch of Jerusalem.

"It's really a thrill," says the Rev. Michael Raun of Washington, D.C., a Franciscan who serves as sacristan at St. Catherine's, the 19th century Catholic church across a Crusader-era courtyard from the basilica.

Last Christmas he spent the night in the grotto, celebrating the mass until dawn.

A gray-bearded Greek Orthodox priest stood by, lest the Catholics stage some sort of precedent that would damage the interests of his church.

The tension stems from the days of Turkish rule before World War I, when rival sects would bribe corrupt officials

The highlight of the mid-night ceremony comes when the patriarch carries a robed, plaster statue of the Christ child from the altar in St.

"This is the mecca of the Christian world, but we are small and poor," Freij said in an interview.

Freij, who is owner of the largest souvenir shops lining Manger Square, blames the various denominations for supporting their own institutions, such as churches and orphanages, and ignoring the needs of the town.

He said $500,000 would be enough to start a $2 million project to turn the square in front of the basilica into a marble plaza complete with statues and fountains, instead of the parking lot for donkeys, cars and tourist buses it now is.

The Jordanian government has cut off its regular payments since the local elections in April, when left-leaning candidates took over most of the town governments in the territory occupied by Israel in 1967.

"We agree that the Palestinian Liberation Organization is the official representative of the people on the West Bank, but that doesn't absolve Jordan and the Arab countries from giving money," he said.

Freij, one of the few mayors who were returned to office, takes credit for the relative quiet in Bethlehem this year, when the rest of the occupied territory was hit by months of rioting against Israeli rule.

He said tourists had nothing to fear when they visit the town, where soldiers in combat gear stand guard outside the holy places.

Fifteen choirs from around the world are expected to sing in Manger Square this Christmas Eve, including a local group that sings "Jingle Bells" in Arabic.

On occasion Turkish governors would issue conflicting decrees that are still in effect despite almost 60 years of British, Jordanian and Israeli rule.

"Western people don't understand this," said Maroun Junan, a Beirut-born Franciscan.

"If I put a carpet down, or a lamp, the spot becomes mine, or even if I sweep there," he said.

There have been no hostile incidents at the grotto for at least 15 years, and even the priests involved maintained friendly relations after the scuffling before that time.

"Afterwards they had feasts and gave greetings," Yunan said.

Catherine's to the low niche underground and places it over a gold and silver star inscribed in Latin, "Here Jesus Christ was born of the Virgin Mary."

Bethlehem is a town of 35,000 Arabs, just over half of them Christians.

Its stone buildings lie atop a ridge of hills six miles south of Jerusalem. Steeples dominate the skyline from Shepherds Field two miles away.

A YMCA and church mark the spot where the shepherds watched their flock when "the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them," in the words of Luke, 1,8.

The mayor is Elias Freij, a short, jowly man who looks at least 16 years younger than his 56 years.

REV. PEGGY BOSMYER: She'll be one of first

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — The Episcopal Diocese of Arkansas will be one of the first to have a woman priest.

On Jan. 29, Bishop Christoph Keller is scheduled to ordain the Rev. Peggy Bosmyer. A national Episcopal convention in September narrowly approved the change in tradition to allow ordination of women.

The Rev. Bosmyer, 27, has been a deacon in the Episcopal Church in Arkansas for more than two years, first in Pine Bluff, then at St. Marks in Little Rock and most recently in the diocesan office at Trinity Cathedral.

One congregation member, who declined to be named, said the ordination will "tear apart the church."

Bishop Keller said Thursday he hoped the decision would not create a division.

"I don't think so...not that everybody's going to like it, but I don't anticipate any trouble," he said.

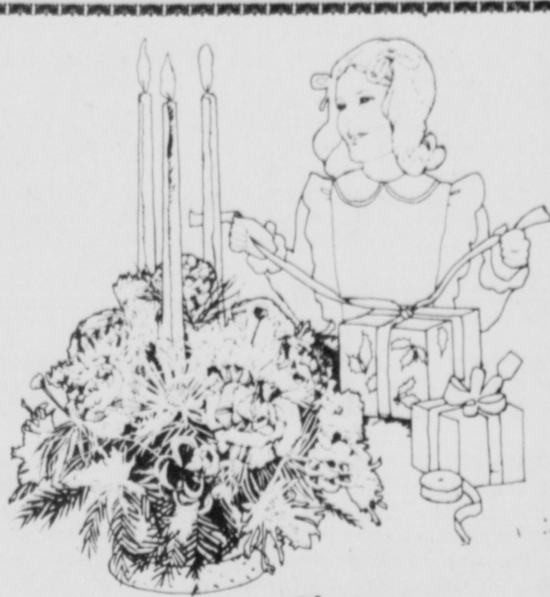

Before the bishop can ordain a priest he must have the recommendation of a seven-member standing diocesan committee composed of clergymen and lay people. Bishop Keller said approval of the ordination was not unanimous "but they did approve it."

Proper Planting of Live Christmas Tree Requires Preparation

By GEORGE E. CREED

If you plan to buy a live Christmas tree this year and intend to plant it after the holidays, you should prepare for its planting now. Should you wait until the day of planting to dig a hole for it, you may be faced with heavy snow or other weather that will make the job more difficult or impossible. Or, you may find that melting snow has made the soil too wet to work with.

The first consideration in planting any tree is determining where to put it. With winter winds whistling about you, you might not give this much thought. If you start early enough in making plans for your Christmas tree, you will have time to select a place for it that will be most suitable for it.

Your next step is to dig a hole — a large one that will accept, with room to spare, the earth ball of the size tree you intend to buy. As you dig the hole keep the good soil separate from the subsoil. If you have no good soil, remove all of the soil you have dug out and replace it with good topsoil.

Fill the bottom of the plant pit with the best soil and, if you have acceptable subsoil, fill in the top part of the hole with that. Now cover the hole with a tarpaulin or other waterproof material and weight it down with stones or other weights, as in the lower left-hand sketch. This will protect the plant pit and soil from the elements. With these steps completed you are now ready to plant the tree when the proper time comes.

In planting the tree, remove most of the soil from the plant pit, leaving enough in the bottom so that when the tree is set in the hole the top of its ball will be an inch or so above the level of the surrounding ground: this allows for settling. Set the tree in place vertically. Now, with the best soil you have fill in around the plant ball, tamping the soil as you go with your feet or with a 2x4. In the event that the soil is dry, water it thoroughly.

If the location you have selected for the tree is where it will be subject to high winds, you had better stake the tree. You can do this by pounding a 2x4 with a sharpened end into the ground (outside the ball, never through it) and fastening the tree to this stake with No. 9 wire. Be sure to encase that section of the wire that loops around the tree with a piece of rubber hose. This prevents chafing of the tree by the wire. Should your tree be in a protected location, you can eliminate staking.

Questions and Answers

Q. In September I divided some peonies and planted the divisions. Should I mulch these? When?

A. Yes, it would be a good idea to mulch them. Do this after the ground is frozen.

Q. What are the advantages in digging up a garden in fall?

A. For one thing you expose a greater area of soil to the freezing and thawing action that tends to make it more friable. For another, you expose insect eggs and larvae to cold weather which kills many of them.

Indoor Gardening

Philodendron Heart a Favorite

By KATHERINE WALKER

If I were asked to name the one foliage plant that most people would know on sight, and the one most widely grown, I'd have to say it is Philodendron oxycardium, better known as Heart leaf philodendron. (In this country, most florists call it P. cordatum, while in Europe it's known as P. scandens, but oxycardium is the correct specific name.)

This vining plant has been well known for more than two centuries, and its popularity hasn't waxed and waned the way it has with so many other old timers. Today, even the indoor gardeners who can't tell an African violet from an episcia recognize this philodendron when they see it, although they may call it Heart leaf or simply cordatum. What's more, they buy it, enjoy it and propagate it endlessly.

In nature (and indoors when well cared for), Heart leaf is a rapid climber, forming aerial roots that attach themselves firmly to any suitable surface. Most indoor gardeners, however, use it as a hanging plant, which is an attractive way to display it but which seldom encourages best growth. Glossy, deep-green leaves are broadly heart-shaped, about five inches long on juvenile plants but often a foot long or more on mature specimens. The vine loves a warm, well-lighted location and very rich, loamy soil kept evenly moist. It will survive in cool, fairly dim places, and will even tolerate dry soil if the condition doesn't persist for too long, but these adverse conditions won't promote good, healthy growth.

How can you tell if your Heart leaf is getting what it wants? First, if the vine consistently produces leaves less than three inches long, it isn't getting enough light. Move it to a partially sunny spot. If the internodes (the sections of the stem between leaves) are more than two inches long, this may also indicate a need for more light. It may also mean the plant needs more watering.

The surest way to determine whether the soil is sufficiently moist is by the general appearance of the vine. If leaves look flaccid and feel limp to the touch or if the color shows a definite bluish cast, the vine is too dry for good health. If leaves turn yellow, or if the stems begin to yellow, either the plant is seriously in need of more water or it has had much too much and the soil is waterlogged.

Even badly yellowed vines can sometimes be resurrected. Cut the vine off just below the lowest leaf, then coil it up overnight in a deep bowl of water. The following day, coil it around in a large pot, covering the stems with about a half-inch of soil but leaving the leaves sticking up. Keep the soil very moist.

Q. I'm having trouble with my fern. It won't get bushy and the lower parts of the fronds turn brown almost as soon as they develop. I always water from the bottom, and am careful not to give too much because the fern is in a real deep pot.

A. I think your fern would enjoy heavy top watering. It's possible that your light watering from the bottom isn't providing enough moisture to soak the roots, so soak the pot thoroughly. Then water heavily from the top often enough to keep the soil evenly moist all the time.

Q. How should the common types of Wandering Jew be cut back?

A. They can be shortened at any time simply by cutting the stems to the length you wish. I prefer to use the cut-off portions to start over again, instead of trying to keep an old plant cut back. After rooting them in water I put them back in the pot with the parent plant, then when they've grown enough, I cut the parent down to the soil.

Rules for Condominium Owners

Many persons who buy condominiums are not well versed in what their responsibilities entail in that kind of transaction. The following letter is an example of one such problem.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: When my parents sold their house, they bought a condominium in a medium-rise apartment building. They occupied it for approximately one year.

Last winter my mother and dad went to Florida for a month to visit relatives. While they were there, my father took sick and was not returned to his apartment since then. The apartment has been empty for almost nine months. I have been making the mortgage payments for them, but have refused to make maintenance payments, since it is obvious they are not using the elevator, having their trash picked up, burdening the doorman, or any other similar expenses that the monthly maintenance charge covers.

The organization responsible for managing the building is threatening to have the apartment sold unless I make an immediate payment to cover monthly maintenance for the past nine months. Do you think this is fair? — VACANT

To you, of course, it is not fair. But it's also not fair to the other owners in the building. The monthly charges for upkeep must be paid, whether you occupy your apartment or not.

Under your maintenance agreement, there is no provision made for empty units.

Therefore, I'd say you are responsible for the payments. I suggest also that if it doesn't seem as though your parents will return, you think about selling the apartment.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: There is a very attractive girl in our apartment building. I've had my eye on her for some time. After flirting with her on the elevator for many months, my message finally got across last week.

At two o'clock in the afternoon we were both in my apartment in a very intimate situation. Lo and behold, the maintenance man opened the door with his passkey and marched in! He said he was looking for a leak.

The girl screamed so loudly they could hear her on the first floor. I don't want to go into detail about what happened after that, but believe me, my reputation is ruined in this building. I would move except for the fact that I just signed a two-year lease. Can I sue the management of the building, since none of this would have happened if their man hadn't barged in unannounced? — LUNCHTIME COWBOY.

The typical apartment lease has a clause in it stating that the owner or his agent can enter your apartment at any reasonable hour to inspect the premises or make repairs. If you were making love in the evening, you might have a claim.

As things stand, I think two o'clock in the afternoon would be considered a reasonable hour. This is why many people install their own chain locks on the inside of the door. If someone entering sees that the chain is on, there is an immediate signal that someone is in the apartment.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: The heat has been on in my house for several weeks, and some of the radiators don't seem to heat up. It does not seem to make any difference where I place the thermostat. Does this sound serious to you? — STEAM HEAT.

It may be a very simple problem. There may be air in your hot water radiators. This air acts as a block and prevents water from circulating through the system. Most radiators have a little "bleeding" valve on the side. You can buy a key at any hardware store which will operate this.

Simply open this valve and let the air out. As soon as water comes through the valve, close it. If you are on the top floor and can't get any water at all, this probably means that there is not enough water in your system.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: We just moved to the suburbs and bought a house on a wooded lot that has many trees. Within the past month, we find that all of the leaves are on our lawn, and none are on the trees. Should we get rid of the leaves? Someone told us they keep the lawn warm over the winter. Others have told us they are bad for the lawn. — WHICH IS TRUE?

Get rid of the leaves now. They will keep your grass from growing. They are much easier to remove in the fall when they are light, and can be easily raked. If you try to remove them in the spring, they will be wet and soggy, and require 10 times the effort.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: We have decided to do some renovating in our house. The question I have is, how many bids should I obtain from contractors? Please answer this as soon as possible, because we are anxious to start work. — REMODELER.

The optimum number of bids to obtain is three. This is enough to give you a sufficient reading on what it should cost to have the work done.

More bids than this are usually unnecessary. However, you may find that it is very difficult today to obtain even one estimate, let alone three. It takes much persistence and telephone calling, but you should find, in the long run, that it is well worth it.

Bringing Home Bacon the Economical Way

Bill Suto and his wife had always wanted to raise their own bacon, but — because they live on a small lot in a Florida real estate development — they hesitated to buy a real, live pig. The problem was, you just can't have a porker or two running around on the lawn (or worse, other people's lawns) in a neighborhood like theirs.

Still, despite their less-than-perfect locale (and despite the fact that they'd never raised a hog before) they were determined that someday they'd give pig ownership a try.

As luck would have it, a friend of theirs approached Bill at work one day last year — about a week before Christmas — and asked him if he wanted to buy a pig.

"Nope," he answered, and went on to list his reasons.

"But you can give it to your wife for Christmas," his co-worker said, half jokingly.

Well Bill mulled that suggestion over awhile ... and decided that, by gosh, a pig would make one good Christmas present! (It certainly wouldn't be the sort of thing his wife would expect or forget!) So — putting aside all thoughts of neighbors and lack of space — he looked his buddy square in the eye and said, "OK. I'll take it!"

When Christmas morning rolled around, Bill had a thoroughly surprised and delighted wife ... plus a seven-week-old piglet! There was just one little problem: The small wire cage in which he'd brought their plump little friend home was much too tiny to serve as his permanent residence. Their piglet obviously needed a much larger home ... and right away.

They built a simple pigpen consisting of one full sheet (4' x 8') of exterior-grade 1/2-inch plywood (for the floor) set in a cradle of four 48" x 56" two-by-four frames, and some eight-foot-long pine boards for siding. Bill calls it the "Quick and Easy" pigpen, because it goes together quickly and easily with the aid of just a few basic hand tools.

(Bill spent around $30 on their pen ... but only because he chose to use all-new lumber. You should be able to put together a similar sty for much less — if not for free — from recycled materials.)

To construct "Pork Chop's" pen, Bill first nailed two 48-inch-long two-by-fours to the ends of a 56-inch-long two-by-four — and closed the open side of the resulting rectangle with a 1" x 2" furring strip — to make one of the sty's four main frames.

After fabricating three more identical rectangles, he simply (1) stood them all upright, (2) spaced them an equal distance (about 32") apart, (3) laid the 4' x 8' sheet of exterior-grade half-inch plywood inside the four sections of framing and (4) nailed the plywood floor down.

He used 8-inch-wide pine boards, eight feet long and spaced four inches apart, for the pen's sides. It's important to nail these planks to the inside of the stall. If you were to spike them to the outside of the pen, the hog would eventually push them loose as he banged against and scratched his rump on the planks.

They mounted gate boards on one end of the pen so that they could slide them in or out (see diagram). This made it easy for them to let their growing porker out regularly while one of them got in to clean his quarters.

They closed off the other end of the sty with a piece of plywood that was cut to fit and spiked on with extra nails. (They also covered that end of the pen with a simple plywood roof to give the piglet a little shade.)

Although some folks might think it is cruel to raise a hog in such a small area, it's not. The Suto's pig lived like a king for the four months they kept him. They changed his bedding of hay or oak leaves (raked from the lawn) every day or two, and buried the old bedding in the garden (to help keep down unwanted odors and — at the same time — fertilize their plants).

They also fed Pork Chop rather lavishly twice a day ... and when it came time to butcher the animal, he tipped the scales at 225 pounds!

When all was said and done (and eaten), they figured the cost of their home-grown, home-butchered, and home-cured pork at around 45 cents per pound ... which isn't too bad, for a first attempt at hog-raising.

It certainly never would have happened in a Florida development, without the Quick and Easy Pigpen!

NUTRITION AND SURVIVAL

By JACK SOLTANOFF, D.C.

Two Americans in Greece—The Marathon

One afternoon between 4:30 and 5 o'clock, some weeks ago, the traffic seemed especially heavy even for downtown Athens, as Mrs. Soltanoff and I approached the multi-laned intersection flanked by the National Gallery on one side and The Hilton Hotel on the other. The explanation soon became obvious. The outside southbound lane on Vassiliss Sofias had been cleared of all automobile traffic to make room for participants in the world famous semi-annual Marathon race.

Their 42 kilometer course (about 28 miles) had begun that morning in the town of Marathon. The first runner and winner had arrived in Athens at about 3 o'clock at the beautiful new Olympic stadium, a masterpiece of architecture, just a few blocks from the intersection where we were standing. (The last runner would arrive at 7 p.m.: no mean accomplishment since this athlete was 98 years OLD!)

A single traffic policeman stationed at the center of this busy intersection was frantically trying to coordinate the activities of runners, vehicles and pedestrians. The runners had to pass through this halted traffic, in some cases barely escaping the bumpers of cars that had just stopped in the nick of time. Short tempered drivers who couldn't care less about the Marathon responded by leaning on their horns.

A pot-bellied panting middle aged runner trotted by, followed a few seconds later by a grey haired elderly man on spindly varicose legs. They certainly did not live up to my mental image of athletes in top notch shape participating in this grueling race, which is held twice yearly in honor of the first marathon runner, Phidippides, who ran all the way to Athens to announce the Greek victory over the Persians at Marathon.

From a safe vantage point on the sidewalk we watched all the commotion, in the meanwhile keeping our eye out for our part-time English speaking Greek guide Georgios who had casually mentioned to us several days ago that he would participate in the Marathon.

He had run many times in the Greek steeple chase as a younger man, jumping hurdles without a horse, sloshing through small ponds and lakes and had decided that now at the age of 29 the Marathon wouldn't be too much of a problem for him to handle. Although we stood there for some time, we weren't able to spot him looping by.

The next day, remembering that Phidippides had dropped dead at the end of the race, we were relieved to hear Georgios answer the phone when we called his home. Although somewhat exhausted, he was happy to provide us with some first hand details about the grueling event in which he had participated.

To enter the Marathon, he explained, only a superficial physical medical examination is required to certify that one's heart, blood pressure and lungs are in reasonable working order. Training for the event, however, is a matter of one's own individual condition and personal motivation. He had decided to give up smoking in the hope of getting his lungs and wind in shape but had not been able to stick to this short term resolution.

Of the more than 966 participating runners, only 145 were Greek. The remainder had come from 14 different countries; 480 from West Germany, 80 from the United States, one from Iran and one from Australia. All had traveled to Athens at their own expense.

Very early in the morning of the day of the race, buses and private cars carried these international runners to the small town of Marathon where they assembled haphazardly at the starting point to await the beginning of the race.

At the gun, they began to run but as it is no easy thing for almost 1,000 runners to get off the starting point at one time at a single shot, it took sometime before the last participant finally got through the starting line.

What would happen, I asked him, if someone should change their mind along the route, or if his legs, feet or arches gave out? "No problem at all," Georgios explained cheerfully, "buses and police cars were stationed all along the route to pick up any dropouts."

Refreshments which included large pieces of sliced lemon, tea and orange juice were all available en route, as well as sponges to mop perspiring brows and bodies.

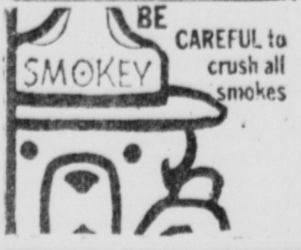

The one real goal for most runners of the Marathon is to complete the race and not worry about their time or standing. Simply completing the race is considered victory.

The last runner to finish this race, 98-year-old Dimitri Iordamidis, in subsequent newspaper and TV interviews attributed his stamina to, among other things, morning and evening "cocktails" of Chamomile tea with lemon juice and a permanent diet that excludes all meat, butter and milk. (Along the lines of what this column has been trying to teach our wise and intelligent readers right along!)

Among the 215 runners who failed to complete the race was an unexpected last minute entrant, an unidentified country dog, one of the first to take off with the starting gun.

"He would have finished first," mused Georgios regretfully, "but once the runners joined the heavy, noisy traffic and pollution entering the city of Athens, as a country dog, he naturally became frightened, could not stand the city air and ran away."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, DEC. 5
Your Birthday Today: Opens a charmed year of personal achievement. Your subtle inner growth is mirrored outwardly by increasing earning capacity, social activity. Relationships become stronger in swift but imperceptible stages: with surprise some minor episode brings out the intensity of ties. Today's natives are addicted to long journeys, either actual or symbolic, eloquent in telling of their discoveries. Those born this year are natural poets, painters, theatrical innovators. Their imagination shouldn't be criticized.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Get your final expansive efforts in on this last day of a direct-action period. The shift is to a more subtle approach. Begin planning a brand new cycle.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Enjoyable as today is, with mystical and spiritual overtones, you still must keep and eye on daily expenses. Promise nothing: you come out ahead shortly.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): If you bump into commercial or political contacts, avoid business. Even simplest communications get mixed up. Build your image toward what you want it to be.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Cause and effect seem remote, unconnected. Listen for shading of words, see where they fit in. Family affairs are fun, lively, more elaborate than expected.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Beware practical jokes or unintentional parallels. Survive a moment of bruised pride; others fare worse. Romantic appeal is sudden, forgotten just as quickly.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Communication is made unreliable by distracting influences, unfamiliar ideas, wishful thinking. Imagination motivates study, research and hobby sidelines.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Try your best to let friends arrive at conclusions unassisted. Expect erratic responses to the disclosures of old secrets, some of which no longer matter.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are esteemed for your considerateness towards others' feelings. Personal contact isn't as urgent now as the need for experience on higher spiritual levels.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take a real holiday wherever you are. It's a matter of mood, rather than not working. Adding creative touches makes routine maintenance more interesting.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Correct decisions are elusive in a fog of uncertainty. Tomorrow you discover basic reorientation is achieved without consciously working out details.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Business is off your schedule, whatever your customs. Suspend judgment on wild stories. People who promise faithfully are not able to sort out motives.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep to a fundamental, well-known minimum. Leave deals for your regular workday. Join friends to compare half-true stories, take none of them seriously.

MONDAY, DEC. 6
BY JEANE DIXON
Your Birthday Today: "Brisk" is the word for the next nine months. The rest of your year and three-quarters of the following year have a boldly speculative quality that insures you'll learn a great deal but won't pile up excess property. Avoid long-term obligations unless they already exist. Today's natives have so many opportunities it's hard to decide on vocations or marriage partner. Those born this year before 5:17 p.m. EST will be self-starters, do two jobs at once; those born later are dreamers, need down-to-earth guidance.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Incoming information involves much fantasy where least expected. Errors elude detection to an amazing extent. Stick at or near home base, stay alert.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): All specifications are subject to revision, so avoid decisions. You can express yourself in original terms. Don't look for clear, immediate answers.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Try to cope with frustration. Talks offer gradual insight into reasons for resistance to plans, perhaps opportunity to educate people to your viewpoint.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Your mood is as far-out as anybody's. Get your thoughts off circular tracks, onto creative directions. Discussion achieves much if you don't force issues.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Your idealism finds an outlet in unrealistic generosity. Think of your cash in terms of your future. Differences of opinion pop up; humor calms them down.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If one obligation runs to crisis, others suffer neglect. Find somebody with your interests at heart to replace you, so you can focus on important items.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't permit people's contrary notions to sway decisions or wreck courses already set. Their remarks are quite absurd. Get a chuckle out of the situation.

Scorpio (Oct. 22-Nov. 21): Talk gets you into spots you'd do well to avoid. Actions are only partly understood or misguided altogether. Keep to what you've checked, found useful.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The less you interfere in natural processes, the better. Long-pending deals end up in surprising results. Come up with oblique answers for competitors.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Protagonists in encounters try to determine who is the most stubborn. A new approach solves old problems. The idea you have now is a starting point.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your urge is to drag in touchy topics for debate under the impression that it clears the air. Avoid arguments, seek scattered items needed for all week.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): This Monday coincides with a full moon, other stirring influences, but nothing turns out as assumed. Set a good example, and help friends settle mixups.

RECORD CUES

SINGLES

You Make Me Feel Like Dancing—Leo Sayer: This is the fastest rising record in the country and looks to be a number one pick. Not since his smash hit, LONG TALL GLASSES (I CAN DANCE), has Sayer turned out a more powerful item than this record. With Sayer currently touring the States to support his hit, this cut will prove to be a gigantic seller.

Somebody to Love—Queen: Just entering the top 40, this is Queen's first single release not included on their hit album, A NIGHT AT THE OPERA. Unlike previous recordings, this track employs a large choir to back the Freddie Mercury vocals, a blend which works well. Expect a new Queen album in the very near future.

Stand Tall—Burton Cummings: His first effort since his departure from the rock group, "Guess Who", this single is a certified hit for this gifted vocalist. A top add-on on AM radio stations throughout the country, Cummings has a pop radio smash and an even bigger hit on Easy Listening and Middle of the Road stations.

LPs

Songs in the Key of Life—Stevie Wonder: Still the hottest album in the nation, this double LP set with the special bonus record is an historic album. In the first place, Stevie may be the man to bring to America the extended play single. This is the standard size, seven inch record which, unlike typical singles, runs at 33 1/3 RPM (not 45) and therefore contains more minutes of music. However, it is not the EP which makes "Songs" such an important album. This package contains some of the most beautiful and relevant pop music of our time and is truly the glorious creation of a profound musical artist. Best cuts: side one, side two, side three, side four and bonus EP.

Wipe the Windows, Check the Oil, Dollar Gas—Allman Brothers Band: Unquestionably the definitive live album covering the second era of the Allman Brothers (post Duane Allman). Including concert versions of their most popular material from the "Eat a Peach" and "Brothers and Sisters" albums, this collection is an absolute must for Allman Brothers freaks.

The Best of George Harrison—George Harrison: Interestingly, one half of the material on this album is from George's years with the Beatles. Contains all previously released material including WHILE MY GUITAR GENTLY WEEPS, HERE COMES THE SUN, SOMETHING, TAXMAN and from George's solo years, MY SWEET LORD, BANGLA DESH and DARK HORSE. How could this album be bad.

JUST BREAKING

Blinded by the Light—Manfred Mann: It took a little time to break out of Mann's superb album "The Roaring Silence," but it looks like this single is finally going to move. One of the most interesting and inventive interpretations of a Bruce Springsteen composition ever recorded. My personal favorite this week.

Golden Soul—Various artists: An indispensable album for Rhythm and Blues freaks, this collection of soul classics is a beauty. Contains some of the best known hits of artists like Otis Redding, The Spinners, Aretha Franklin, The Drifters, Ray Charles, Wilson Pickett, Sam and Dave, King Curtis and Roberta Flack.

INTERNATIONAL NOTES

QUICKIE QUIZ

What is the longest running chart single so far this year?

Answer: A Fifth of Beethoven—Walter Murphy Band—23 weeks.

Hot Rocks

Wonderama Wonderful R'nR

By ALAN FORRAY

If you don't already know about it, let me take this opportunity to turn you on to one of the great Rock and Roll experiences of our time. It's a media thing and it happens over the airwaves of the Greater New York, Mid-Hudson Region.

As a further hint, I should say that this weekly musical event is not to be found on the radio, but rather on our television sets. No, it is neither Don Kirshner's Rock Concert nor the Midnight Special, though it is a weekend program.

If you don't know yet, you might try asking the nearest seven year old. As any child can tell you, if you want the best in Rock music, there's no better place to turn than WONDERAMA.

Every Sunday morning, WNEW's Bob McAlister gathers together with a bunch of screaming little kids to play a variety of games and tests of athletic skill and intellectual prowess and also to listen to a song or two by a contemporary music act. And, not only do the top 10 bubble gummers appear to push their familiar wares, but regularly does Wonderama see some of the most progressive underground groups gracing their stage.

In recent weeks I have seen the likes of Don McLean, Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes and Abba. One of the most memorable acts to appear on the Sunday morning showcase was Elton John and Kiki Dee who, while in New York during Elton's fall tour consented to perform their then number one hit, DON'T GO BREAKING MY HEART, before throngs of frantic kiddies delirious at the sight of their Rock and Roll heroes.

And don't think for a minute that the tiny tots of television don't know the music and careers of these Rock superstars. The fact of the matter is that the record companies who foot the bill for the appearances of their artists on Wonderama are doing so out of the shrewdest of capitalistic motives.

Recent studies of pop music attitudes, tastes and consumer trends have indicated that children from the ages of seven to 12 are among the most consistent record buyers in the country and therefore a logical target for record industry's promotional efforts.

Furthermore, there is much to be said for the notion that while young children dominate the selection of programs tuned in early Sunday mornings, there is an overflow of that program content to their older brothers and sisters and parents and so forth.

It is therefore not difficult to understand why a group like KISS might muster up the energy to arise at the crack of dawn to don their costumes and makeup in order to put in an appearance at this popular Rock and Roll forum.

Whatever the case, the bottom line is good contemporary Rock and Roll music happening in your living room Sunday after Sunday and I for one hope it continues.

Wonderama is a gas.

half of them would light.

If all the old Mae West movies were laid end to end, Mae would be absolutely delighted.

How come we never see Finicky Morris bury his food in his sandbox? That's what our Sascha did with it once.

Country and Western is slicking itself right out of an audience. The next lowest common denominator will be either bluegrass or polka music. Stick that in your bowling ball and roll it.

We just saw a fake Christmas tree with artificial snow. It looked like a five-foot-tall bottle brush with dandruff.

The Record We'll Never Get to Buy Five Copies of: Piano Solos by Elton John. No vocals. Just two sides of piano playing. With maybe a few pinball bells thrown in.

There. Now that's one way of cleaning our desk of all these scraps.

With apologies to that columnist who wrote the original "Nobody Asked Me But..." columns for the Hearst syndicate more than a decade ago...

Nobody asked us but...

There is a Cher doll. Believe it or not, there is also a Sonny doll. So why isn't there a Greg Allman doll? To say nothing of dolls of the two little kids? Sort of an up-to-date Sunshine Family. Call it the Sunshine Triangle.

Why not a Cher talking doll? Press on its naval and it says, "Send me my alimony check, Shorty." "Our guest on this week's show will be Chastity," and "I want a monkey fur bolero."

We now have movies like "Godfather II" and "French Connection II" and a car called the LTD II. We're waiting for the electric train set called the "II, II."

Somewhere between "A Fifth of Beethoven" and "Disco Duck" we began to get the feeling that the hustle is not a dance. It's a record promotion.

Marty Feldman just might be Hollywood's next sex symbol. Listen, after what happened to Kristofferson, we'd believe anything.

My, it's nice to have a new Beatles single out. Who are the Beatles? Life goes on and on alright. You know it's been going on and on when all the songs you like on the old gold shows are re-done by other groups and show up on the hit lists again, and all the songs you liked from the hit lists are showing up on the old gold shows. Off and on, life goes on and on.

We suppose Jimmie Carter must have a CB set. Could his handle be Peanut Patter? Well, how about Grin One?

CHILLED CHAMP

It's an icy but victorious Rich Hoss at the finish

Hoss Is Home First In City Cross Country

KINGSTON — The City of Kingston felt the sting of winter's wrath Saturday, but the snow and frigid temperatures failed to deter a hardy band of 40 runners who got the City Cross Country Championship off on schedule.

Twenty minutes and 17 seconds after the starter's gun sent the pack off into the storm, Rich Hoss, a Red Hook High School student, crossed the finish line to claim a victory.

The field was sliced into seven divisions. The women and the under 13 groups ran 1.2 miles; the rest competed at 3.6 miles. Hoss, the overall victor, raced in the 14-18 category as did his closest pursuer, David Parker who crossed in 20:42.

Steve Van Keuren paced the 19-24 runners in 20:58. Leading the 25-34 age group was Arthur Driscoll who was clocked in 20:58 also. In the 35-44 division, David Senecalle won with a time of 22:08.

The 45 and over crown went to Bernie Stahl in 24:45. On the shorter course, Tim Higgins took the under 13 title in 7:47, and Eileen Casey was the women's champion in 7:28.

Van Keuren and Driscoll were tied for third place overall. Behind Van Keuren in the 19-24 group was Matt Mandel who finished in 21:24. Driscoll had a wider margin in the 25-34 division as he topped runnerup Michael O'Hara (23:40) and third place Harvey Gregory (24:17).

Senecalle was 31 seconds faster than Fred Schwitz within the 35-44 category. Avery Smith took third in that group with a 24:23 time. Behind Stahl in the senior men's race were Rich Impola in 26:32 and Joe Keller in 29:28.

Higgins had the smallest victory margin, but that was still far from close as he beat Pat Higgins by 14 seconds in the under 13 runners. Tom McCann was trd in the division in 8:10.

Casey, a standout for Kingston High School, topped Coleman High's Betty Ann Jerkowski who ran in 7:58. The third woman across was Beth Hooker who posted 8:55.

Kingston Tops All-DCSL Grid Team; Tigers' Schmid Is Two-Way Choice

POUGHKEEPSIE—Champion Kingston High School dominated selections to the Dutchess County Scholastic League coaches all-star football squads announced today with 10 first-team choices and two second-team picks.

Included on the first-team offense were three-fifths of "Bad Company", KHS' self-named offensive line, and the entire right side of that line.

Kingston's first-team picks included fullback Joel Etter, right end Al Schmid (the only player to make first team on both offense and defense and one of five players to make both squads), right guard John O'Meara, right tackle Jeff Kaplan, center Dan Curlin, specialists kicker Emile Jordan and punter Jay Faust, and Schmid, defensive back Clark Waters and linebacker Tom Loughlin on defense.

Saugerties lone representative was linebacker Lars Hauck, a second team defensive pick.

It was easily Kingston's best showing on the all-league honor roll since joining the DCSL in 1972.

Kaplan, O'Meara and Curlin made up 60 per cent of "Bad Company," the name the offensive line tagged on itself for easy identification. "Bad Company" opened the holes for Etter, who rushed for 1,022 yards during the Tigers' 7-1 DCSL campaign.

Faust, who also started on defense and was the third-string quarterback, averaged 41.3 yards per punt. Jordan kicked field goals and was nearly perfect on extra points.

Jordan was also named to the first team of the DCSL soccer team, one of the few athletes to achieve the rare feat of being named to the first team in two sports in the same season.

The DCSL first-team offense also included running backs Jim Brennan (Roosevelt) and Tom Norton (Lourdes), quarterback Jim Mahoney (Arlington), wide receiver Greg Oliver (Beacon), end Gene Ennesser (John Jay), guard Dennis Capolino (Lourdes), and tackle Kurt Westfall (Arlington).

The second-team offense was made up of running backs Pat Archer (Beacon), Tim Mackey (Arlington) and Jeff Van Shaack (Ketcham), quarterback Joel Thomas (Ketcham), wide receiver Mitch Bernasconi (Arlington), ends Steve Lollar (Roosevelt) and Jim Leary (Ketcham), center Bill Leary (Ketcham), guards Joe Brenner (Roosevelt) and Jim Ball (Arlington) and tackles Chris Charter (Lourdes) and Sandy Hamilton (Ketcham).

The first-team defense consisted of Waters, Schmid, Loughlin, backs Bernasconi and Jeff Short (John Jay), linebackers Steve Depree (Roosevelt), Steve Misuta (Lourdes) and Ralph Bartschi (Arlington) and linemen Phil Spencer (Roosevelt), Jerry McElduff (Lourdes), Mike Tierney (Lourdes) and Bill Leary.

The second-team defense, besides Meyer, Hauck and Falatyn, included backs Tim Mulvey (Poughkeepsie), Mike Jaycox (Roosevelt) and Norton, linebackers Bill Coughlin (Lourdes) and Tom Sullivan (Beacon) and linemen Bill Martico (Poughkeepsie), John Lindenaver (Beacon), Westfall and Ed Hurley (John Jay).

Players besides Schmid to earn both offensive and defensive designation were Bernasconi, Bill Leary, Westfall and Norton. Out of 50 positions on both teams, Kingston led with 12 choices, followed by Lourdes (eight), Arlington (eight), Roosevelt (six), Ketcham (six), Beacon (four), John Jay (three), Poughkeepsie (two) and Saugerties (one).

Hawks Dump Concordia

PURCHASE — It helps to know what you're up against. The New Paltz State basketball Hawks proved that Saturday night when they took on Concordia in the consolation game of the Manhattanville tournament here and came out with their second win of the year by a wide, 90-64 margin.

New Paltz dropped a 98-83 decision to Mercy College in Friday's first round, but Hawk coach Joe Donovan got a chance after that to watch the second game and find out what the opposition would present Saturday. Host Manhattanville sent Concordia into the losers' bracket, so Donovan had a scouting report to go by for the first time in five games.

The Hawks struggled with a sluggish offense and pulled out to a nine point halftime lead over Concordia. After the break, New Paltz screwed the clamps down hard on Concordia and bolted out to an unsurmountable lead.

Three big Hawk seniors, Ron Monroe, Tom Booker and John Fortune, came off the bench in the second half to spark the win. All three broke out of minor personal slumps with their performances. Monroe pulled down 11 rebounds to help the Hawks win the battle of the boards.

Ron Domanski led a balanced New Paltz scoring attack with 15 points. High in the game was Concordia's center Walt Knox who canned 23.

Against Mercy Friday night the Hawks had a couple of problems. They shot poorly, especially from the foul line, and they couldn't defense the winners' three-pronged scoring attack. Brian Donahue, Tom Sivulich and Ed Pennergast all reached the 20-point plateau with Donahue's 29 markers leading the list, and a lot of those points came from the charity stripe where New Paltz found the going difficult.

New Paltz opens its SUNYAC season Tuesday night at Elting Gym when Oneonta State invades. The upstarters boast former Ulster CCC star Carl Mabry and former Liberty High stickout Reggie Biddings.

Cards Keep Hopes Alive

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — "I wanted to compensate," said St. Louis safety Ken Reeves. "He had made a play on me and I wanted to pay him back."

Reeves was three strides behind Raymond Chester when the Baltimore tight end hauled in a 30-yard touchdown pass from Bert Jones in the third quarter of Saturday's game.

The score brought the Colts to within 21-17 going into the final quarter and Jones moved Baltimore to the Cardinals' 31-yard line with a little more than a minute remaining in the game.

Jones again looked downfield and found Reeves covering Chester.

"I knew it was coming my way," said Reeves. "I thought, 'Lord, can I make it.' I knew if I didn't, I'd read about it in the papers tomorrow."

Reeves moved in front of Chester and intercepted the pass to end the Colts' scoring threat and preserve a 24-17 Cardinal victory.

The victory also preserved the Cardinals' playoff hopes. With a 9-4 record, they can gain the wild-card berth if they beat the New York Giants in their final regular season game next Sunday and Dallas downs Washington.

St. Louis is known for its explosive offense but it was the defense that provided the big plays in the final minutes of the game.

The last Cardinal tally came on a 22-yard Jim Bakken field goal with 2:34 remaining in the game after the defense sacked Jones. John Zook belted Jones from behind, knocking the ball loose, and Charlie Davis recovered for the Cardinals at the Baltimore 35.

Zook brushed blood from his lip after the game and said, "I'll take a cut lip anytime we can beat a team like Baltimore. It was a win we had to have."

"I think today was one of our biggest defensive games," Reeves added. "The defense has been coming along all year. We may peak just as we enter the playoffs."

Baltimore Coach Ted Marchibroda, who saw his team drop to 10-3 and blow a chance to clinch the AFC East crown, said, "It was an excellent interception by Ken Reeves."

Jones shrugged and said, "It was a bad pass and he caught it. That's all there was to it."

Jones lost a pitching duel to St. Louis quarterback Jim Hart, who finished with 13 completions in 22 attempts for 204 yards. Hart's passing was complemented by the rushing of Jim Otis, who had 106 yards in 29 carries.

Big Trades Expected At Baseball Meetings

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Major league clubowners, their "big bucks" free agent bidding war concluded, are expected to revert to some old fashioned "horse trading" this week when they convene for the annual winter baseball meetings.

With the Reggie Jacksons, Bobby Grichs, Joe Rudi and Don Gulletts, etc., all settled in their respective new million dollar homes, the lords of baseball now have a better perspective as to their needs in the off-season player trading market. And there are expected to be at least a dozen or so deals consummated at the winter meetings in addition to numerous other schedule and rules items on the five-day agenda.

The New York Yankees' acquisition of free agents Jackson and Gullett most surely will spur Eastern division rivals Boston and Cleveland into some swap action if they are going to compete successfully for the division title next year. Similarly, the California Angels' signings of Grich, Rudi and Don Baylor has their principal AL West division rivals — Kansas City, Texas and Minnesota — eyeing the trade route as a means of remaining competitive.

Cleveland, which picked up 20-game winner Wayne Garland in the free agent sweepstakes, reportedly is seeking a power hitter which manager Frank Robinson feels should be the final link to a championship caliber club. Minnesota is also in need of a long ball hitter.

Prior to the free agent draft, at least two noted power hitters — Milwaukee's George Scott and Texas' Jeff Burroughs — were known to be available for the right price. The Red Sox, meanwhile, desperate for front line pitching to match the Yankees' Gullett, Catfish Hunter, Ed Figueroa and Dock Ellis, will quite likely have to yield one of their promising young front line outfielders, Dwight Evans or Rick Miller, if they are to achieve their needs.

National Leaguers can also be expected to show renewed enthusiasm for trading — especially in light of the world champion Cincinnati Reds' loss of Gullett, their ace pitcher. Already there has been a flurry of player deals since season's end and most of them involved NL clubs, particularly St. Louis. The Cardinals, in separate swaps, picked up pitchers Larry Dierker, John D'Acquisto and Mike Caldwell.

The interleague trading deadline expires midnight Dec. 10, but unlike previous years, it will be reopened again during spring training when the clubs have had first hand chances to evaluate their talent. At last year's winter meetings in Hollywood, Fla., 64 players changed teams in 23 different trades.

Besides the trading activity, other items which require the clubowners' attention include a proposed earlier start to postseason play, the still-unresolved designated hitter rule and possible National League expansion.

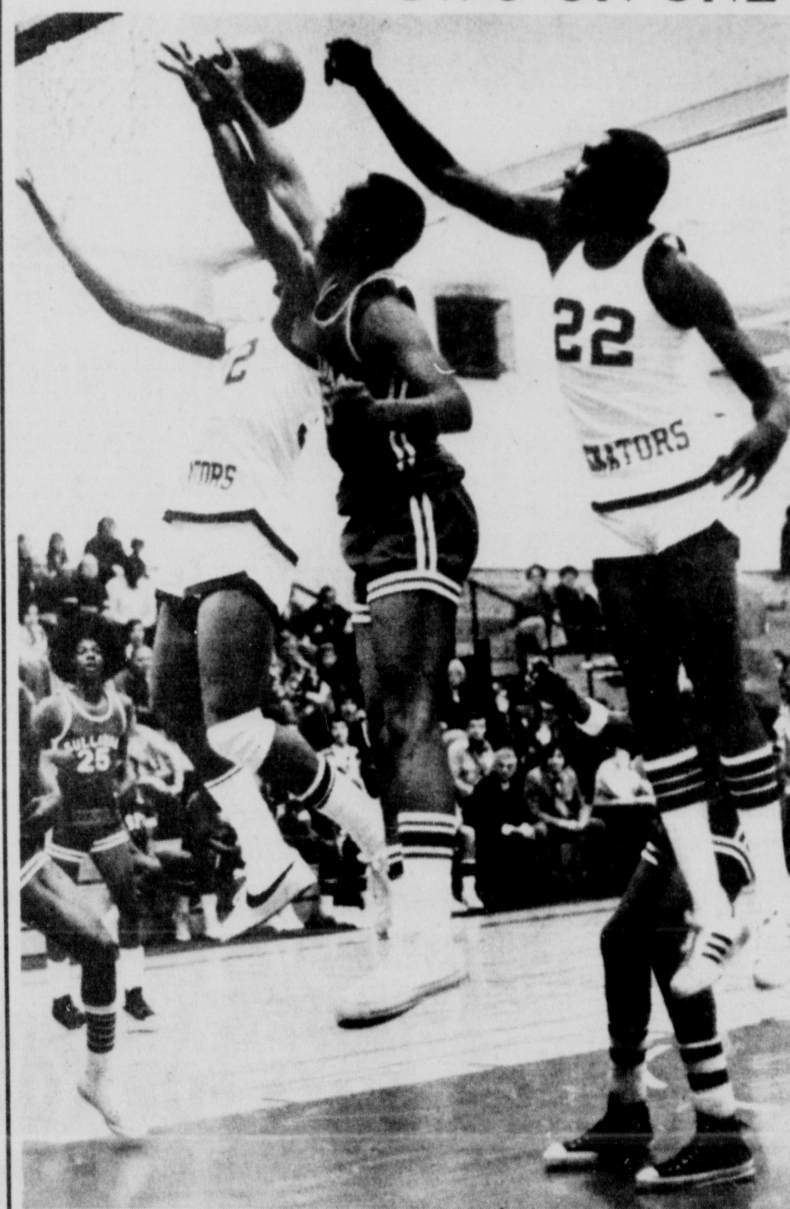

The frigid autumn evenings caused much debate as to whether baseball was wise to schedule World Series and playoff games at night so late in the year in order to accommodate TV. Many of the owners are known to favor a shortening of the present 162-game schedule or an elimination of travel and practice time between the end of the season and the opening of the playoffs so as to insure more favorable weather conditions for baseball's showcase games.

As for the designated hitter rule, which was used in the World Series for the first time this season, there have been reports that the National League has softened its stand against the rule and may, in fact, even vote to adopt it. The NL owners will most surely debate the issue in separate conferences.

Besides the designated hitter, the NL is also expected to renew discussion on expansion — an item which, led by Bob Howsam of the Reds, was rejected during a hastily-called league meeting last spring. With the American League now expanded to 14 teams and toying with the idea of breaking into three divisions, the Nationals may be forced to follow suit. Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has been urging the NL to include Washington, D.C. in any expansion plans.

The meetings will officially convene at 10 a.m. (PST) Monday with the major league draft of minor league players left off the parent club's 40-man rosters.

Circling the bases....

It was just before the third game of the American League championship series in October when Reggie Jackson was holding court in the home team dugout at Yankee Stadium. There were three of us listening as Reggie attempted to satisfy our curiosity about where his baseball future would be staged.

"I won't tell you what team I have in mind," he began, "and the whole thing should be off the record. But you guys are sportswriters so you should be able to figure out where I'm talking about."

"First thing, I've gotta go to a team than needs a leader. This team could have used one the last few weeks of the season and no one came up."

"Second," he continued, "the team needs that left handed power hitter. They're pitching isn't all that good and they could use the long ball. Third, it might not be in the American League."

One reporter immediately ruled out the Mets. Too much pitching. Another KO'd the Yankees. Good lefty power. Jackson then threw in one more point.

"The Yankees won't want me because it throws they're whole lineup out of whack," he asserted. "The last thing they want is another left handed hitter. They see plenty of lefty pitching as it is. And anyway," he smiled, "if I come here they'll say I want to take Graig Nettles' number away from him."

The session ended, Jackson heading upstairs to the ABC-TV booth, the reporters wandering their separate ways to sit on the semi-news they had just heard. And now, of course, we all know the post script. Jackson put his name on a Yankee contract last Monday; the Phillies, the team we feel he must of been hinting about during that dugout session, were long since eliminated from his thinking.

Yes, the Yankees appear top-heavy with lefty sluggers, particularly if Ron Blomberg makes it back from the injured list, but that's all the better for trading purposes. And, no, Jackson won't take Nettles' No. 9. He'll wear No. 42, in honor of the late Jackie Robinson.

The question: with Jackson and Don Gullett now in the fold, is it too early to apply for 1977 World Series tickets?...

Speaking of the World Series, a Chicago Cubs' fan wrote The Sporting News recently, asking what would happen to Bowie Kuhn's series night games if his Cubbies ever made it. Wrigley Field, Chicago's home park, is the only one in the big without lights....

Writing about Roosevelt of Yonkers' overtime win over Kingston High School in the recent Section One Class AA bowl game, Richard Rothschild, sports editor of the Yonkers Herald-Statesman, said: "Kingston's football team, which has been absent from Westchester since the 1971 AA Bowl, impressed many fans with their ability and sportsmanship. The Maroons will never lose a tougher game, but players and coaches alike accepted the decision with discipline and character."

"It was a great game," Kingston head coach Tony Badalato said. "We were glad to be involved"....

Hoe-Bowl-on-the-Hill general manager Ralph DeStefano admits his firm has been "disappointed" with business since taking over from the Ferraro family several months ago. "We thought things would be a little better," he revealed. "But we think they'll pick up." DeStefano calls the economy the major factor in any decline at the Kingston facility....

The American Bowling Congress lists 14 great kegglers on its 1977 Hall of Fame ballot. In the running are Glenn Allison, Don Ellis, George Howard, Al Cohn, Billy Golembiewski, Lee Jouglaard, Earl Johnson, Tony Lindemann, Carmen Salvino, Andy Rogoznica, Harry Smith, Bob Strampe, Bill Tucker and Zeke Zikes....

Hunter Mountain, which used to boast the "biggest snowmaking" facilities in the East, has changed that "biggest" to "best". The twin ski complex at Vernon Valley/Great Gorge, N.J., currently claims it has the "world's largest snowmaking system" and offers $50,000 to any other ski center that tops it.

"We've put $3 million into our snowmaking system so we can provide skiers with fine conditions as soon as the weather is cold enough. Our system can produce three or four times what the other big areas of New York State or New England make." This from Mary Meyers, a spokesperson for VV/GG.

Still on skiing, Cortina Valley in Haines Falls has announced the appointment of Bob Straw as its new general manager and Judy Kraft as its ski school director. Straw is fresh from 20 years at Mount Ascutney, Vt., three last three as GM. Cortina has 10 trails and four slopes with three lifts....

Here's one sure to keep the argumentative fires burning. Take a list of the top athletes produced by New York State high schools and whittle it down to the best three. One sage nominates Jim Brown of Manhasset, Al Oerter of Sewanhaka and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (AKA Lew Alcindor) of New York City's Power Memorial. Your other choices? Well how about Lou Gehrig, Sandy Koufax, Bob Cousy, Hank Greenberg, Ernie Davis, Carol Yastrzemski, Carmen Basilio, Whitey Ford, Warren Spahn, Sid Luckman, Frank Frisch, Gene Tunney, Jack Sharkey, Julius Erving, Bob Lanier, Connie Hawkins, Steve Williams, and Nate Archibald. Have fun with that one....

The National Football League's Super Bowl program will be available to fans not able to make it to Pasadena. Send $2.50 each to Super Bowl XI, Winona, Minnesota, 55987...Three American Leaguers played in all of their teams' games last season, Rusty Staub, Detroit (161); Robin Yount, Milwaukee (161); and Buddy Bell, Cleveland (169). John Mayberry played in 161 of Kansas City's 162 games.

A Visit With Kingston's All-Time No. 1 Bowler

There was a time when we bowled side by side on lanes as far apart as Brockton, Mass., and St. Louis...a time in our youthful exuberance we thought would never end. On local lanes we hosted an endless parade of the finest tenpin craftsmen in the Northeast, a dozen or more who eventually found their way to the Hall of Fame. Then came the void.

It wasn't exactly a local rerun of the Sunshine Boys when we visited with Johnny Ferraro at Mid-City Lanes. Unlike George Burns and Walter Matthau, we had many areas of agreement.

And with his distinguished career behind him, the sale of the Bowlerama consummated, his interest in harness racing undiminished, Ferraro was in an expansive mood as we talked about things past and present over a 45-year span of time.

Ferraro's credentials as Kingston's all-time No. 1 bowler are overwhelming...He launched his career as a bowler and proprietor in a four lane establishment on lower Broadway in Newburgh in 1952, came to Kingston to build the Central Recreation on Railroad Ave., the Bowldrome on Cornell St. and then his biggest undertaking of all—the 52-lane Bowlerama, recently sold to the Mardi-Bob bowling enterprises of Poughkeepsie.

His individual exploits are legendary, the yardstick by which all area bowlers are measured. He rolled a sanctioned ABC 300 in 1945 and added a dozen more in open and special matches. He also won ABC awards for a pair of 299s and two 298s.

The day (Feb. 20, 1954) he established the all-time Hudson Valley League triple record of 818, Ferraro preceded it with a 300 game in practice. The 818, incidentally, was the fourth highest in the nation that year. His 213 average that season also set the all-time standard in the Hudson Valley League and he can recall the day he rolled a pair of 300s in a friendly match.

There was the day Ferraro rolled a 300 game and 795 series against a powerful Schenectady team headed by the late George Sabatini.

"I hadn't rolled a 600 series in several days," he recalled. "So, I decided to junk the ball I was using and picked one off the rack. I got the 300 and a split in the last game cost me another 800 series."

The conversation got around to the decline of the Italian-American bowler. Where once the eastern part of the country was thoroughly dominated by bowlers of Italian parentage, there are now only three with national reputations—Carmen Salvino, Johnny Petraglia, and Mike Limongello.

"How do you account for so few outstanding Italo-Americans?" we asked John. And without giving him a chance to replay we ticked off a list of past immortals — and most of them in the Hall of Fame. Names like Barney Spinella, Joe Falcato, Andy Varipapa, Jimmy (Mellilo) Smith, Tony Sparando, Jim Murgie, Eddie Botten, Frank Caruana, Skag Mercurio, Hank Marino, Marty Cassio, Lou Campi and Buzz Fazio.

"I really don't have an answer," he replied. "Most of the greats you mention came out of the pinboy pits. But the automatic pinspotter eliminated the pinboys. I suppose it's a change in attitudes. You might compare it with the absence of white boys in boxing today. Here we are with the biggest purses ever in bowling and boxing and great Italo-American bowlers and white boxers are almost non-existent."

Charles J. Fiano

You simply can't get two old timers together without the subject of all-time greats coming up. We asked John to name his all-time national team based on his experience as an observer and competitor.

"I'd start with Junie McMahon," he said without hesitation. Then after a thoughtful pause, he added other names like Andy Varipapa, Joe Falcato, Mort Lindsay and George Young. What a team, even if Tomy Sparando is not on it!

Having picked a national squad, the conversation drifted to the local level where picking all-time teams gets a little hairy. Nobody wants to offend anybody and no matter whom you pick, there will always be challenges to the selections. And since John is the unchallenged No. 1 and two other members of his family are eligible for, all-time rating, Ferraro was reluctant to make the first move. So, we took the offensive.

"How does this hit you?" we asked John, as we rattled off names like John Ferraro, Jack Ferraro, Chris Gallo, Fred Rice and Randy Kelder.

"That's a pretty fair team I'd have to say," John responded. "It would be hard to beat."

Any all-time team that covers a 40-year period has to pass up a large number of superb performers. There is no way you can avoid it. The list is substantial. The names? Larry Weishaupt, Tom Carlino, Harold Broskie, Ken Williams, Buster Ferraro, Bill Thiel, Larry Weishaupt, Big Bob Shlightner, Eddie Modjeska, Dick Howard, Herb Petersen, Clifton Quick and Joe Schrowang.

Larry Petersen and Buster Ferraro would get their share of votes in a consensus. Ditto for Gil Sampson. There are other names — Bob Haley, George Shufeldt, Charles Petri, Charlie Manfro, Chic Carlino, Dick Spaulding, Angie Fondino, Reuben Leventhal, Whitey Crispell, Bob (Tall) Smith. And there are others. And no matter what combination you pick, the rebuttals are re to follow.

"How about a Broskie-Carlino-B. Ferraro-L. Petersen-Howard combination?"

"Would be very tough," Ferraro replied. "All of which proves that it's not all that easy, we agreed after our long session of name dropping."

"The problem here," Ferraro suggested, "is that we are comparing bowlers from different eras. Conditions and equipment have been improved, runway lengths and lane conditions are more uniform. Bowling balls are more scientifically constructed and pins generally lighter."

How would you compare the moderns with the oldies? "The same old questions pop up in every sport," he replied. "Nearly all of the present day bowlers are products of junior leagues and were exposed to the game many years before the old timers. Junior bowling is well organized from the grade school level up. There were no such programs years ago and most of the great bowlers came out of the pinboy ranks."

"Bowlers tended to take up the game much later in life," he added. "The modern bowler matures much faster than the old timer."

We agreed on one item. There is no comparison between the competitive atmosphere of our time and that which exists today.

"Practice is almost non-existent with the higher average bowler these days," John pointed out. "They come to the lanes, bowl their league match and that's it. In the old days, there were special team and individual events, pot games for real stakes, inter-city leagues, more exposure to state and national competition. Travelling leagues, well you hardly hear about them anymore."

"The old time hotshot lived in a much more competitive world and that's one factor you can't overlook when picking all-time teams."

Time was running late so we decided to forego picking an all-time women's team. We did agree on four names without hesitation — RDse Schatzel, Evelyn Gross, Dot Rawding and Sis Balash. No. 5? Well, that's going to take a little longer and we'll save that for another day.

Did John have a favorite story?

"One night after the great Joe Falcato had rolled an exhibition at the Central Rec, we went out for dinner and a few drinks. Joe was a great needler, if you remember. He always referred to us as farmers."

"When we got back a friendly argument started and Joe offered to bet $10 that he could beat me with his overcoat on. I thought that was a steal. We changed shoes and started on lanes 7 and 8 (alleys in those days)."

While an unbelieving group of railbirds looked on, Falcato rolled 245 and pocketed the $10.

"With his overcoat on?"

"Yes," smiled John with a faraway look. "He had the overcoat fixed with a trick sleeve. He fooled a lot of bowlers with that one...inclVding one farmer from Kingston."

Wildlife Group Asks for New National Policy

By CARRICK LEAVITT

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — President-elect Jimmy Carter, a self-styled Georgia quail hunter, is being asked to form a combined national energy and conservation policy.

"Conservation has not been addressed adequately on the national level," said Tom Kimball, executive vice president of the 3.5 million member National Wildlife Federation. "We need a comprehensive national energy and conservation policy — we haven't had it in the past."

"Carter has a very fine environmental record (in Georgia) and we expect him to be sympathetic," said Kimball, in San Francisco recently for a meeting of the newly formed California Natural Resources Federation.

The outlook for stepped up wildlife conservation is good under the Carter administration, he added in an interview, noting that the Washington, D.C.-based federation has submitted a list of the country's most pressing outdoor needs to the new President.

Based on Carter's "verbal commitment as well as past actions in his performance as governor we expect him to be sympathetic," Kimball said.

"And we intend to see to it that policies are developed by the new administration that will benefit fish and wildlife."

He noted a top priority will be to get the toxic substances out of the waterways — such as acid mine drainage, PCB and kepone — whose total effects on the ecosystem are still not fully understood.

"We want to find out what effect these chemicals that they are dumping into the rivers and lakes have. We want the government to get to the manufacturers and work with them on this."

Other areas in which the National Wildlife Federation has appealed to Carter for action included: stricter control of forest and public lands use, agriculture subsidies for farmers who use methods that increase wildlife habitat, air pollution control and reclamation of strip mining areas.

"His response has been generally favorable — that he will consider our requests," Kimball said, noting the list was submitted in writing shortly before the Nov. 2 election.

During Carter's four-year term as governor he strongly supported programs in Georgia which expanded wildlife research and added thousands of acres to wildlife management areas.

The reason was apparent personal interest. In an interview with a national magazine (Outdoor Life) Cajter said, "I've hunted and fished all my life."

"When I say bird hunting, I'm talking about quail hunting."

Hunters, fishermen and outdoorsmen are the most significant protectors of endangered species and endangered areas, he said.

Carter also has taken a strong stand in favor of habitat-restoration programs at government expense, wilderness preservation, and the multiple-use concept in national forests wherein fish and wildlife are considered as important as logging, mining and grazing leases.

"Carter seems to express a better interest in conservation than some former presidents," said C. Ray Arnett, president of the 40-year-old National Wildlife Federation.

"The federal government must become involved in all facets of the outdoors, not just hunting and fishing."

Weight Situation Is Key to KHS Mat Success

KINGSTON — Dean Short's problem is that his Kingston High wrestling team might be a little fat this year.

No, not fat psychologically. Sharing the Mid Hudson Conference title and winning the DCSL league tournament last year just made the Tigers hungrier for bigger things. Fat physically.

"On paper we look strong," said Short assessing his team, "but the weights are critical. We have a lot of kids at new weights this year, and that means their strength gain must equal their weight gain. Also, if somebody doesn't make his weight, then that means we either have to move everybody up or waste a good wrestler."

A trio of Section One champions return as the KHS tri-captains this season. Phil Brown is at 119, Emile Jordan is at 126, and Doug Reedy is at 132. That's an excellent nucleus, but that threesome is also causing Short some concern. It's partially because they're in successive weight classes.

"If Brown misses his weight, then I either have to move the other two up or wrestle two of them off," said Short, enthuse with neither possibility.

There are similar situations throughout the lineup, but the problem isn't critical yet. December weights are lower, for one thing, and the couple extra pounds allowed in January will ease the pressure a bit. In addition, most of the wrestlers will compete above their actual weights during the early going. "It won't come to a head until tournament time," said Short, and he should have it worked out by then.

More likely to be a problem is depth. "We're not real deep except in 138 and maybe 98," said Short. But the Kingston coach can take plenty of solace in what shapes up as a good front line of competitors.

In 91, Louis Hamer, a junior high city champ, will lead off for the Tigers. He replaces Greg Manual who this year is up to the 98 class. Manual placed fourth in the DCSL last season.

Also up a class is Herb Peterson, third in the league at 98 pounds a year ago. At 112 are a few possibilities including soph Ray Long, senior Geoff Megargee and Jon Sippel. Behind Brown at 119 is Kevin Suckles who should see plenty of action particularly in the early part of the season.

That's a lot of lightweight potential. The middleweights look even stronger. Brown, Jordan and Reedy are among the best' and they ought to be able to handle an extra class. Reedy can go as high as 138, and behind him there will be Steve Yakatis, who sat out last year after a strong sophomore season, and Mike Manuel.

At 145 Short is counting on Ralph Mitchell. Mory Katz, a steady veteran, is back at 155.

At the bigger weights the picture is a little fuzzier. Billy

Jones and Kirk Maisch are set at 167, but the Tigers don't have a real 177-pounder. Matt Broncato will fill the gap originally set for Craig Turner, but Turner now tips the scales in excess of 190 and may not manage to lower that figure sufficiently.

Turner and Tom Loughlin will start out as heavyweights. At superheavy, rookie Jeff Kaplan and veteran Phil Razy will reign. Razy was a standout last year and needs only to recover from a neck injury to regain that status.

Despite the thin spots and the budding weight crisis, the Tigers are optimistic.

"We've got high goals," said Short. "We want to go undefeated—of course every team wants that, but we also want to repeat as league champions and get some state recognition."

None of that will be easy, not even repeating in the conference. "It's going to be balanced this year," noted Short. "You know Arlington will bounce back, Saugerties will be strong again, and John Jay is always a tough team. Besides that we've got a difficult schedule. We've got Mt. Vernon up here this year, and they'll be up for us after we beat them. We've also got Port Jervis, and I understand they're usually strong."

Kingston opens the season Friday at Beacon.

Kingston Is Team to Beat in DCSL Swimming

KINGSTON — It's a young Kingston High swimming team this year. Right now the Tigers have some injuries, a little bit of sickness and are lagging a bit in the practice sessions, but when they begin their DCSL season Dec. 14 against Lourdes, it's safe to assume that the KHS stranglehold on the league title is in little danger.

Kingston, since it joined the league in 1972, has never lost a meet. An improved Poughkeepsie team should produce the most serious challenge this season, but the Tigers, even with their large contingent of youngsters, still rate as strong favorites to repeat once again.

Co-captains Steve Olsen and Rick Zioncheck and a triumvirate of sophomores, Kirk Jacobs, Ken Acquiva and Chris Burns, are coach Floyd McCormick's blue chip veterans. Returning also are a couple of consistent point-getters in Kim Janssen and Kelly McCormick, and Andy Kovacs, potentially the squad's top diver.

McCormick is counting heavily on the contribution he expects from seven freshmen. That group, five swimmers and two divers, will have much to say about just how strong KHS turns out to be this year around.

There's another Tiger newcomer sure to be heard from—Mary Beth Pechloff isn't any stranger to area competition. After a year at Coleman High and another in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., where she picked up experience in the AAU girls Nationals, Pechloff, now a junior, will be scoring for KHS.

"Her times are a little off right now," said McCormick, "but as soon as she gets some conditioning, the boys will have their hands full."

On the tactical side of the issue, Kingston looks strong in the sprints and relays, deep just about everywhere, and uncertain in the distance events. The Tigers lost all their distance swimmers, including ace Paul Hansen, and are looking to Steve Goeller and Dave Jordan to pick up some of the slack.

TRIM'S ARENA

"We're young," McCormick admitted, "but if it all works out we'll be in good shape."

In the team's initial scrimmage, Bill Clark and Bob Turnbull of that group of freshmen were particularly impressive. McCormick figures John Hickey, Brian Wilson and David Janssen will also develop into key performers. Eric Kaminsky and Steve Chase will boost the ranks of the divers.

Zioncheck also performs as a diver; Olsen ranks as one of the better freestyle sprinters around. McCormick ought to be able to come up with a contender in any event under 200 yards.

Practice conditions are still not the best for the Tigers. Their pool time is limited to an hour a day, and while that's a handicap, only one team in the league, Poughkeepsie, manages better.

The Pioneers have their own pool, a good supply of talent coming back, and freshman sensation Steve Punt. They could supply Kingston with its toughest league competition yet.

Elsewhere, though, the league picture remains dim. Lourdes rates below KHS and Poughkeepsie at this point, and budget-strapped John Jay and Ketcham are working together under one coach, Bud Parsons.

Kingston opens the season Monday with a non-league meet at Marlboro.

After Getting Past Sullivan

Senators Brace for Tough Week

By BRUCE GOLDBERG
Freeman Staff

STONE RIDGE—Mike Perry feels his team could sink to the .500 level by this time next week.

"If we play like this next week," said Perry, "we'll be 3-3 after Saturday night in Westchester."

Right now his Ulster County Community College basketball team is 3-0 after the Senators got by a fired-up, hustling, undermanned Sullivan CC club, 81-70, in a Mid-Hudson Conference contest Friday night. UCCC is also 2-0 in the conference while the Generals sank to 1-3 overall, 1-2 in the league.

"If I hadn't seen it, I would not have believed it," Perry said as he shook his head disgustedly over the play of his squad. "I know we're capable of playing much better than that. It's certainly nice to win a game like this. Sullivan was hungry and we weren't."

"We took them for granted," Perry added. "We saw them play twice and our guys thought they could just blow them away. I can't believe we played so poorly."

Well, the Senators weren't all that bad, but Perry expects far more than he usually gets. Ulster captain Phil Blount, the team's only sophomore, was the hero of the game, pouring in 19 points in the second half, 23 total, as he sparked the Senators and kept them in the game with his second-half scoring, rebounding and defense. All that despite playing with painful stomach cramps.

The conditions were ready-made for an Ulster rout as Sullivan came with only eight players, big man Ed Dotts shot horrendously and got into early foul trouble before finally fouling out, and Sullivan wound up shooting a terrible .400 from the field, including an anemic 37.7 in the first half on 15 of 40 field goals.

But the Generals came out scrapping and took a surprising 17-6 lead with the game 7:25 old thanks to their pressing defense, superior rebounding at both ends of the court and Ulster turnovers. Generals George Abrams, Ron Miller and Jeff White did most of the early scoring.

But then the Senators put together their best stretch of the game, reeling off 20 consecutive points in the next 6:29 to go up, 26-17. They did it by working the ball outside via the floor leadership of sub guard J.P. Porter and by Sullivan shooting as cold as the outside weather.

During that 20-point skein, Reggie Blanchette paced the Senators with seven points, Vic Williams added five and a blocked shot, Tony Gibson had a bucket, steal and blocked shot, and there was one bucket each by Blount, Steve Watts and Charie Stokes.

The teams played evenly the rest of the half, although Ulster did open up a 37-24 lead, their biggest all night, before Sullivan closed with a 9-1 rush to make it 38-33, Ulster at halftime.

Blanchette had 13 points in the opening half, while Blount and Gibson each had four points and seven rebounds. Abrams led the Generals with 12 points. Dotts had only two points, making his first field goal after missing eight attempts.

With Miller, White and Abrams doing the scoring and the Generals' pressing defense again causing Ulster turnovers, Sullivan kept it close for half of the second half, even taking one lead, 58-57 with 9:10 remaining.

It was then that Blount, who had already scored six in the second half, went to work.

Playing like a man possessed, he poured in 13 points in the final nine minutes, muscled his way under the boards for rebounds and enabled the Senators to pull away. Watts' rebounding contributed with steals, rebounding and scoring.

Sullivan, though it never quit, didn't get closer than five points the rest of the way.

Blount (23) and Blanchette (19) led the Ulster scorers, and Watts and Paul Gejac added 10 each. Gibson was the top rebounder, collecting 10 of the Senators' 41, with Blount (nine) and Gejac (eight) also clearing the boards.

Ulster sank 33 of 69 field goals, almost 48 per cent, with Blount (nine for 13) and Blanchette (eight for 11) the hot shooters. Ulster was terrible at the free throw line, successful on only 15 of 29 charity tosses.

Abrams, a superb player in all phases of his game, scored 22 to lead the Generals. Ike Merritt added 13, Miller 11 and White 10.

Sullivan coach Roland Gray credited his assistant, Nate Patton for devising the game plan that stymied Ulster for much of the game. "Give him the credit, he prepared this team," said Gray. "We went flat twice, Ulster got some fast breaks and went ahead for good in the second half."

Perry, who fretted over Ulster's season-high 28 turnovers, also found time to moan about the defense. "Our defense bogged down, I don't know what it is. We need to work on our defense, our free throw shooting and our passes. Outside of Phil (Blount), nobody really had a good game."

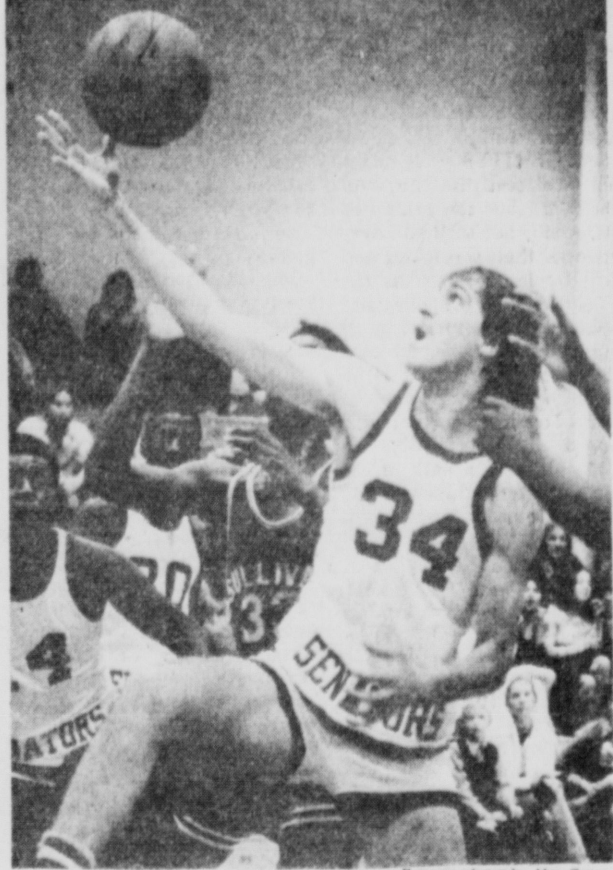

Ulster faces a tough week, starting with a visit to Rockland on Tuesday, a visit from Orange on Thursday, and a trip to Westchester on Saturday.

This Will Be a Long Weekend For NFL Champion Steelers

By UPI

This weekend will be a long one as far as the Pittsburgh Steelers are concerned.

The Steelers, playing perhaps the best ball in the National Football League over the last two months, are still struggling to make the playoffs and defend their Super Bowl title. Their last real opportunity could come this week.

Pittsburgh stayed alive in the race by beating Cincinnati 7-3 in the snow last week to cut the Bengals' lead in the American Conference Central Division to a game. The Steelers, who have won seven games in a row after a 1-4 start, are expected to handle winless Tampa Bay at home today and then will spend Monday night in front of their television sets watching the Bengals tangle with the Raiders.

Oakland is 11-1, the best record in the NFL, and has clinched a playoff berth. Should Pittsburgh defeat Tampa Bay as expected and the Raiders beat Cincinnati, the Steelers and Bengals would enter the final weekend of the regular season tied for first. If they finish that way, Pittsburgh is the playoff representative since the Steelers defeated Cincinnati twice in head-to-head competition.

Cincinnati closes out next week against the injury-riddled New York Jets, who have won just three games this season, while Pittsburgh is at Houston against the Oilers.

Pittsburgh's wild card or best runnerup chances are almost non-existent since New England, second to Baltimore in the AFC East, has a better record. Should Pittsburgh and New England tie for the wild card, the Patriots make the playoffs since they defeated the Steelers in their lone meeting this year.

Cleveland, tied with Pittsburgh for second in the AFC Central, also has a shot at a playoff berth after winning seven of its last eight games but it would take a near collapse by the other contenders for the Browns to slide in. Cleveland plays host to Houston today.

There has been talk about the possibility of the Raiders actually gaining an advantage by losing to Cincinnati—that would virtually eliminate the powerful Steelers, who have ousted Oakland the last two years, from playoff contention—but Raider Coach John Madden and Al Davis, the team's managing general partner, scoff at the idea.

"We were aware of all the possibilities a couple of weeks ago," said Madden. "We also have heard the Steelers and their belching. The only thing on my mind is the Bengals and how we are going to beat them. Everything else is incidental."

"They are being ridiculous," added Davis, "and I for one am tired of listening to the Steelers. Our goal is to win our last two games, and that means beating Cincinnati so that we can be the home team in the playoffs. For anyone to charge anything else is simply too ridiculous to deserve my comment. We are out to beat Cincinnati and we think we can do it. That, I hope, ends the discussion."

Baltimore was at St. Louis and Atlanta at Los Angeles on Saturday.

Entering the weekend activity, Dallas, 10-2, held a two-game edge in the NFC East, with St. Louis and Washington battling for the wild card berth. Minnesota has clinched its division and the Vikings, now 10-2, are looking for a home field advantage in the playoffs. That goes to the team with the best record.

A New England victory over New Orleans would provide the Patriots with at least a wild card berth and their first playoff slot in 13 years.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Midfielder John Brooks scored the game's only goal at 11:46 of the second half Saturday to give sixth-ranked San Francisco a 1-0 upset victory over top-ranked Clemson in the semifinals of the NCAA Division I soccer championships.

San Francisco (19-2-3), the defending champion, will face second-rated Indiana in the final today. The Hoosiers knocked off third-ranked Hartwick, 2-1, in the first half of the semifinal doubleheader.

Brooks, a freshman from England, took a toss from Andy Atuegbu and cut past one defender to score from 15 yards out. His shot was one of just five in the game for the Dons.

Clemson's offensive front line, stymied for most of the game, opened up in the final 15 minutes. Christian Nwokocha had the best chances for the Tigers but two head shots from close range were high.

The loss was the first of the

USF Upsets Clemson; Hartwick Loses

season for Clemson, now 18-1-1.

In the first game, freshman forward Angelo DiBernardo, who was not expected to play because of a groin injury, scored two goals, including the game winner at 11:11 of the second half to give Indiana its victory.

Following a scoreless first half, Indiana got on the board first when DiBernardo dribbled around three defenders and scored his first goal on a 10-yard shot at 8:43.

Hartwick answered 1:32 later when Joey Ryan headed a corner kick by Stephen Long. but DiBernardo scored the eventual winning goal at 11:11 on a 25-yard shot.

The win boosted Indiana's record to 18-0-1. The loss for Hartwick was its first of the season against 15 wins and one tie.

Broyles Quits; Royal Next?

Frank Broyles of Arkansas announced his resignation as head football coach Saturday night and his counterpart at Texas — Darrell Royal — met for more than two hours with school officials to apparently notify them of his retirement plans. Broyles, the tall, southern gentleman who put together 18 straight non-losing seasons with the Razorbacks, announced his decision prior to a season-ending game between the Longhorns. Two hours earlier Royal concluded a meeting with the Texas athletic council, which voted unanimously to urge the Longhorns coach to remain as the school's athletic director.

Veteran third baseman Bill Melton was sold by California to the Cleveland Indians Friday for an undisclosed amount of cash and a player to be named later...

Earl Anthony rolled two 10th frame strikes for a six-pin win over Ernie Schlegel and then breezed past his two remaining opponents Saturday to capture the $10,000 championship prize in the $100,000 AMF Grand Prix of Bowling at Thunderbowl Lanes. Betty Morris won her second title of the year for the top $10,000 prize in the women's division.

With customary ease, French pro ski champion Henri Duvillard stormed through 10 consecutive runs to collect $3,125 and first place in the giant slalom of the opening world pro skiing meet of the 1976-77 season.

Ruben Amaro, an executive in the Philadelphia Phillies' farm organization, said Philadelphia has offered home run hitter Greg Luzinski to the Chicago Cubs for second baseman Manny Trillo and outfielder-first baseman Rick Monday.

Tom Watson fired a five-under-par 67 Saturday and extended his lead to seven strokes but Japan took a two-stroke advantage over the United States, 1,702,170, in the annual U.S.-Japan Golf Tournament.

Trade rumors involving Buffalo Braves forward-center Bob McAdoo were circulating again Saturday. Earlier this week, reports had been heard that the Braves were ready to deal McAdoo, who has won the National Basketball Association scoring title for the past three seasons, to Seattle in exchange for center Tom Burleson and cash. The latest rumor, following the Braves' 135-122 victory Friday night over the New York Knicks, has McAdoo going to the Knicks for a player and cash.

Martina Navratilova grabbed a straight-set victory to reach the finals without ever losing a set but Betty Stove required three sets to eliminate the last Australian player Saturday and reach the finals of a $100,000 women's international tennis tournament.

India's Amritraj brothers teamed up in doubles Saturday to demolish Japan in straight sets and give India a 2-1 lead in the East Zone Davis Cup tennis match.

Wise Philip, a 15-1 shot, overcame favored Teddy's Courage in the stretch to win a three-quarter length victory Saturday in the $54,100 Discovery Handicap at Aqueduct.

Broadcasting plans for the 1980 Winter Olympic Games will be the focus of a two-day conference in Lake Placid Tuesday and Wednesday, with 75 broadcast executives scheduled to attend.

Harris went into the game with 5:04 left in the third quarter and directed the Rams to three more touchdowns, including an 80-yard bomb to rookie wide receiver Dwight Scales with 4:39 remaining.

Fifteen-year defensive tackle Merlin Olsen, probably playing in his coliseum finale helped the Rams keep the befuddled Falcons in their own territory all day long. The farthest Atlanta got in the game was to its own 48 yard line late in the third quarter before defensive end Fred Dryer sacked Kim McQuilkan and McQuilkan fumbled.

McQuilkan, who replaced Scott Hunter in the second half in a vain attempt by the Falcons to generate some offense, threw two interceptions and Atlanta turned the ball over four times. Safetyman Bill Simpson intercepted a pass and recovered a fumble for the Rams.

The Ram defense had six quarterback sacks, four of them in the second half against McQuilkan, and restricted the Falcons to just 81 total yards.

The Rams rolled up 569 total yards as the trio of quarterbacks — Haden, Harris and Ron Jaworski — completed 18 of 39 passes for 369 yards. Ron Jesse caught four passes for 112 yards for Los Angeles.

Jaworski, the Rams' opening day quarterback at Atlanta three months ago, came into the game for the final Los Angeles series and got his team a touchdown on a 47-yard, fourplay drive culminated by Cullen Bryant's three-yard touchdown run.

Successful Debut for Colavita's Sawyers

By EMILY SPOLJARIC
Freeman Staff

SAUGERTIES — It might well have been the King and His Court, but the game was basketball, not softball. Nevertheless, there was a king and he did rule the court as the Saugerties High School varsity basketball team turned in an impressive 79-71 victory over Rhinebeck Friday night in its home non-league debut.

Tim Cole led the charge and topped all scorers with 25 points, leaving a path of destruction for Rhinebeck to travel over in his free reign of the court.

"I was glad to win," said Saugerties' new coach Dick Colavita. "It was the kind of thing where we didn't know how our offense would look because this was our first real competition. But I am very pleased."

Saugerties took command from the opening shot and the outcome was never really in doubt. By halftime, the Sawyers had amassed a 38-21 lead on some excellent aggressive play by Chris Swech and Kevin Chairiot. Numerous steals combined with the long pass to the open man were exactly the right formula as the Sawyers highlighted it all by some dazzling execution.

"I was especially pleased with the second quarter," said Colavita. "We played disciplined ball and we were tough."

The Sawyers carried their reign through the third and fourth quarters and all the way to the last minute of the game before things began to happen. Three quick steals by Rhinebeck combined with a couple of fouls and a lost jump ball, put the Indians to within eight points, before the Sawyers were saved by the bell.

"I was pleased with the way we came back," said Rhinebeck coach Bob Allen, also making his debut. "They put the zone on us in the first half, but by the second half, we were able to adjust to it."

Colavita, who replaced Larry Marcus this year, attributed his team's success to a well-oiled forward line. "We ran a disciplined offense for three quarters of the" he said,

"but late in the fourth quarter, we stopped playing our game and tried to play theirs and that's what happened. If we can play disciplined ball, and we can strengthen our bench, we'll be tough."

Allen, successor to Chuck Sherman at Rhinebeck, expressed optimism for his team's future. "We had a height disadvantage tonight," he noted, "but that shouldn't be as great a factor in our league."

Jim Fariello led the Indian scorers with 21 points and was praised by his coach for an outstanding effort along with Steve Sherman, who was second in line with 17 points.

In the junior varsity contest, Saugerties dominated 58-43 as Rich Estick was high man with 14 points.

The Sawyers will meet Hudson on Tuesday in their second of four consecutive non-league matches before they make their debut in the Dutchess County Scholastic League against Poughkeepsie on January 4.

The team wasn't expecting miracles, but if this contest was any indication of what's in store, there will be a lot of surprises.

Coleman Takes Pair From Volleyball Foe

KINGSTON — Snow prevented the clash of the UCAL's volleyball unbeaten, Fallsburgh High and Marlboro, Saturday. That match will be played this week.

There was action Friday, however, and in those battles Coleman swept two straight from Red Hook, and Wallkill dropped both legs of a triangular to Onteora and New Paltz. Results of the New Paltz-Onteora clash were not reported.

The Stateswomen got by Red Hook with comfortable margins of 15-11 and 15-10. The winners had no individual stars and simply used a strong team effort to boost their record to 4-6. In the junior varsity encounter, it was Red Hook by scores of 15-6 and 15-13.

Wallkill, a slow starting team, didn't fare well in its opener against the host Hugies. New Paltz cruised to victories in straight games, 15-6 and 19-4. The Panthers, though, recovered a bit in time for Onteora and forced that match into a third game.

In a battle marked with several long rallies, OCS rebounded from a 15-12 setback to post 15-11 and 15-5 decisions.

Mike Kekich Is OK

MARACAIBO, Venezuela (UPI) — Texas Rangers left-hander Mike Kekich was released from the hospital Saturday following removal of his spleen and pronounced fit to pitch in the Venezuelan winter league again in five weeks.

Kekich, who was injured in a playing field rhubarb last Sunday, planned to take it easy in this lakeside oil metropolis until Sunday, when the stitches were to be removed. He was then to fly to Caracas to join his La Guaira Shark teammates.

"He will be able to pitch again in five weeks. His excellent physical condition helped him to a rapid recovery, and he had two spleens, which is not unusual," surgeon Alfonso Arrieta Alvarez said.

Kekich had run from the dugout to throw his arms around teammate Clarence Gaston, who had charged the mound when he thought Zulia pitcher Milt Wilcox had attempted to bean him. Gaston, in an effort to get free to swing at Wilcox, dug his elbow sharply into Kekich's mid-section.

"Hell, it was just and incident on the ballfield. What do you reporters want me to do, go down to the police station and sign a declaration?" an exasperated Gaston asked newsmen before last night's Zulia-Caracas game in Caracas. The Sharks were idle and in the Stands.

"The main thing is that Mike is okay," Gaston said.

Wilcox jumped his winter league contract and flew back to the states after the game in which the Kekich incident occurred. The Zulia baseball club has petitioned the Venezuelan league to seek his suspension in the Winter Leagues for three years. This would ban him from play in Venezuela, Mexico, Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic.

Now! Two big $253 Specials from AMC, the small car specialist.

Unlike the other manufacturers, who build cars of all sizes, AMC is exclusively a small car producer. Therefore, we have a lot at stake on the success of small cars.

Recently, the small car market has diminished substantially. Over the last five years, increased costs have forced prices up more than $1,000. As a result, American car buyers have pretty much stayed away, not only from AMC small cars, but from all small cars.

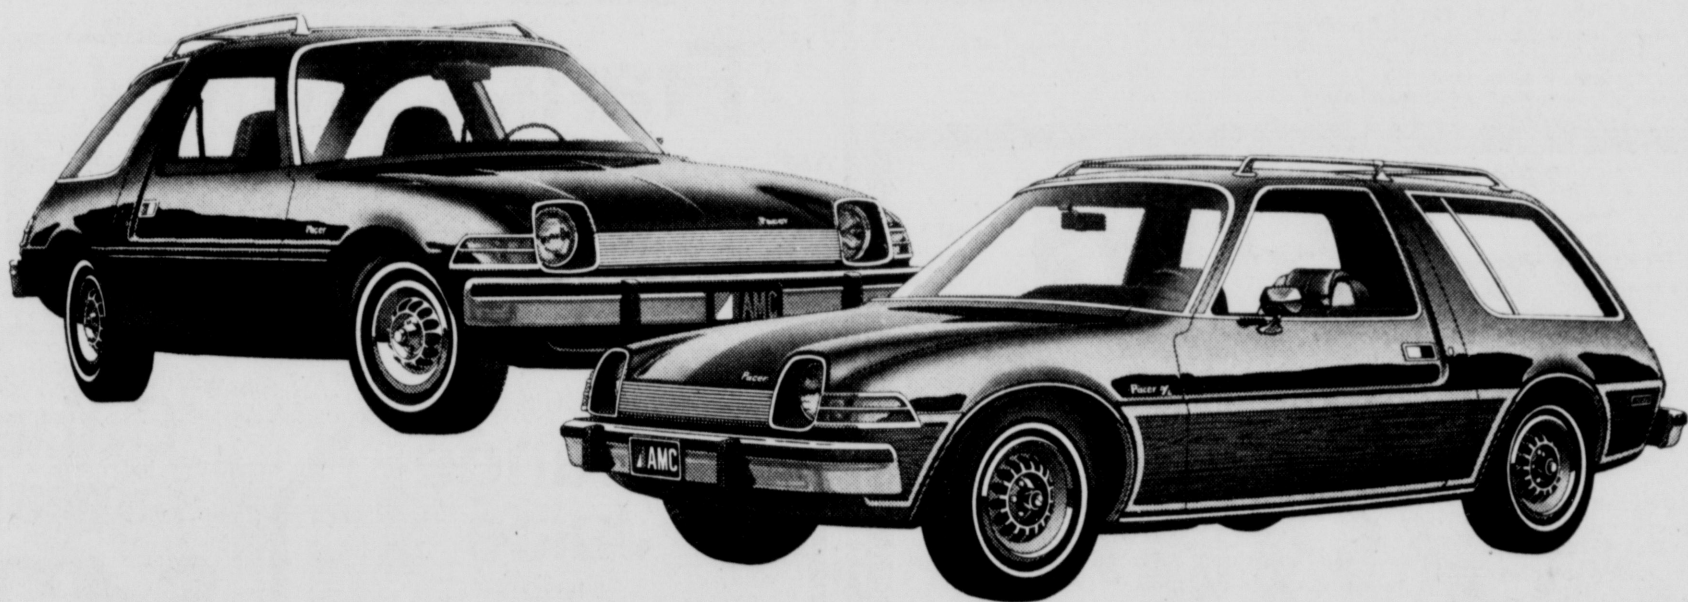

At American Motors, we're doing something about it. By attacking the problem in the most direct way we know how. By initiating pricing programs designed to save you a lot of money.

Our goal is to increase our sales volume by encouraging you, the car buyer, to return to the small car market. If we can get you to consider a small car, we're confident that the small car you buy will be an AMC.

2) $253 price reduction on every new 1977 AMC Gremlin.*

Lombardi Award Finalists

A nationwide committee of 59 college coaches, sportswriters and sportscasters has selected the four finalists for the 1977 Vince Lombardi Award. Contenders for the trophy, presented to the outstanding college lineman in the country, are: Ross Browner of Notre Dame, Robert Jackson of Texas A & M, Al Romano of the University of Pittsburgh and Wilson Whitley of the University of Houston. The award will be presented Jan. 17.

Vols Get Their Man

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The people of Tennessee finally are getting the coach for whom they've been campaigning for three years, and the University of Pittsburgh, which looked years for the man that could lead it out of football obscurity, is shopping once again after only a year in the limelight.

But this time the search shouldn't be as hard as when Pitt was looking for someone to take over a 1-10 team. Coach Johnny Majors, who announced Friday he was resigning to become head coach and assistant athletic director at his alma mater, the University of Tennessee, is leaving behind a program he shaped into this year's top-ranked team.

"I don't have to worry about people calling for the job," said Pitt athletic director Casimir Myslinski.

Myslinski said applicants have been calling him ever since Bill Battle resigned as Vols' coach Nov. 22 and Tennessee said the job would be offered to Majors, its former All-American tailback.

Myslinski said he hoped to name Majors' replacement by Dec. 21, the day the Panthers fly to Biloxi, Miss., to begin preparations for the Sugar Bowl, where a win over fourth-ranked Georgia could give them the national championship.

Myslinski said he had a list of "less than 10" candidates he was working from. He would not mention any names, but it was rumored those under consideration included Navy coach George Welsh, former Notre Dame coach Ara Parseghian, Frank Burns of Rutgers and Jackie Sherrill, a former Pitt assistant and now head coach at Washington State.

Parseghian, however, has said he would never return to college coaching.

"I'm very sorry to see Johnny go; he's done an excellent job here," Myslinski said. "All the recruiting he's done we'll be benefitting from for three or four years."

But, he added, "I don't think we'll be dropping down from No. 1, because we plan to stay there."

Majors, meanwhile, said he hopes to carry the team he carried as a player to a No. 2 ranking and the Sugar Bowl in 1986 back to national prominence. The Vols were 6-5 this year.

"I'd like to see what the challenge would be to build the program up to what it was before," Majors said.

Majors will sign a six-year contract giving him a $50,000 annual salary on Jan. 2, the day after the Sugar Bowl. He will start work the same day.

He flew down to Knoxville, Tenn., today for a news conference concerning his plans for the Vols.

Bowls to Decide Nation's No. 1

NEW YORK (UPI) — Once again the bowls will decide who's No. 1. The entire list, in fact, may be in for a drastic shakeup from No. 1 through 20.

All but two of the top 20 teams in the current ratings by UPI's board of coaches are in the bowl line-up between Dec. 18-Jan. 2 and the potential is there for a final shuffle every bit as shocking as a year ago.

At that time, Ohio State plunged from No. 1 to No. 4 by losing to UCLA in the Rose Bowl and Arizona State jumped from No. 7 to No. 2 by completing a 12-0 season with a victory over Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl. West Virginia and Southern California moved into the top 20 with winning bowl efforts while Kansas, Florida, Colorado and Tulsa were bumped from the previous list which included 22 teams, counting ties for 19th place.

At least four teams, maybe five, have a shot at No. 1 this season.

Pittsburgh, No. 1 at the moment and 11-0 going into the upcoming Sugar Bowl game, has been a strong vote-getter throughout the month of November on the basis of its perfect record but needs another victory to stay on top. If Pitt stumbles against No. 4 Georgia on Jan. 1, all sorts of dandy combinations will be confronting the voters in their head-scratching over final rankings.

Heir-apparent would be the Rose Bowl winner between No. 2 Michigan and No. 3 Southern California. Nevertheless, a tie there could drop them both and a listless game might even deglamorize the winner. If Georgia were to score impressively over Pittsburgh, there might be room at the top for the Bulldogs.

Then there's No. 5 Maryland, 11-0. With a better bowl matchup, the Terps might have a good shot at No. 1 but they'll be meeting No. 7 Houston in the Cotton Bowl Jan. 1 and Houston was 8-2 heading into its final regular season game against Miami Dec. 4. Maryland could move up but No. 1 is a long shot.

The only top 20 teams missing from year-end competition are Rutgers, tied for 15th with an 11-0 record, and Baylor, tied for 17th.

Using team rankings as a basis for rating the bowls, the Sugar and Rose are tied with a rating of five. Pittsburgh (1) and Georgia (4) add up to five for the Sugar. So do Michigan (2) and Southern California (3) for the Rose. Next comes the Cotton Bowl with a rating of 12 matching Maryland (5) and Houston (7).

The Liberty Bowl rates 21 with UCLA (6) and Alabama (15T), the Orange Bowl is a 22 with Ohio State (10T) and Colorado (12), the Astro-Bluebonnet at Houston rates 27 with Texas Tech (8) and Nebraska (19), followed by the Sun Bowl at 30 with Texas A. and M. (10T) and Florida (20) and the Tangerine at 31 with Oklahoma State (14) and Brigham Young (17T).

The Fiesta and Gator Bowls each have one ranking team — No. 9 Oklahoma vs. Wyoming in the Fiesta and No. 13 Notre Dame vs. Penn State in the Gator. North Carolina and Kentucky, in the Peach Bowl, are unranked.

Most of the matchups are interesting. They'll all be significant in the final ratings compiled after all results are in. That's when the real No. 1 will stand up.

Coleman Booters Dominate First Team Picks

KINGSTON—Led by the UCAL's top two scorers, senior forwards Joe Schell and Charles McDonough, Coleman High School placed five players on the 13-man first-team UCAL soccer squad as chosen by the six coaches.

Statesmen Tim Quillan (junior fullback), Charlie Klepeis (junior halfback) and senior goalkeeper Joe Charmello also made the first team.

Rondout Valley, UCAL champs with a 7-2-1 record, was next with a trio of Ganders including senior halfback James Hopkins and junior forwards John Schaeffer and Mike Mills. New Paltz placed senior fullback Malcolm Bartow and senior halfback T.N. Thompson, Pine Bush placed sophomore forward Ralph Cassagnol and junior fullback John Piazza and Onteora's representative was senior fullback Bob Berkley.

It was Berkley's fourth consecutive year on the UCAL's first team and he was chosen the league's Player of the Year. Andy Lutz of Rondout Valley was picked as Coach of the Year.

New Paltz paced the second team with five picks: junior fullback Rod Dressel, senior halfback Fred Schmalkuche, and forwards Mike Weiss and Scott Taylor, both juniors, and John Hain, a senior. Also named to the second team were junior goalkeeper James Stap of Pine Bush, soph fullback Richard Kump of Rondout, junior full back Tom Stepson of Onteora, senior fullback Bruce Elmore of Rondout, senior halfback Matt Ernest of Onteora, senior halfback Tom McCluskey of Rondout, soph forward Tom Byer of Rondout and senior forward Tony Diers of Fallsburgh.

Schell, who played three years on the varsity, co-captained the squad along with McDonough and played at left inside. He led the UCAL scoring race with 14 goals and three assists for 17 points. He's a repeat first-team pick from 1975. He totaled 16 goals, five assists, 21 points and was considered the fastest and most disciplined player on the squad by coach Roland Augustine Jr.

All-UCAL Soccer Team

McDonough, the right inside, also played three years of varsity ball. Keyed by a four-goal game against Fallsburgh, he tied with Thompson for second in the UCAL scoring list with nine goals, one assist, 10 points and added four assists in other games.

Klepeis played at left halfback and filled in at forward at times. Charmello had four shutouts in 10 games and averaged 15 saves per game. He managed 20 tough saves against Goshen in the 4-3, overtime Goshen victory in the sectionals. Quillan, center fullback, overcame a severe foot problem at the beginning of the season to become the key defensive Statesman.

Onteora coach Ron Valle is high on Berkley. "He is an excellent student, a gentleman in school and his community and has the respect of his peers. I believe that he has potential to play big time soccer. For the last two seasons, I have said that he is one of the finest players in the area."

Berkley is considering attending and playing soccer at either Hartwick or Cornell next year. Valle believes he will earn scholastic all-America honors this season.

Mills was fourth in the league in scoring (7-2-9 league, 10-5-15 overall) and Hopkins had four goals and three assists for Rondout. Schaeffer scored five goals and two assists.

Bartow and Thompson were the Huguenots' co-captains this season. Thompson tied with McDonough for second-leading league scorer (6-4-1 league, 8-6-14 overall) and was considered the most improved player on the team by Hugie coach Eugene Ventriglia. Bartow "is an excellent tackler and plays good positional soccer," said Ventriglia.

Cassagnol came to the United States from Haiti three years ago and transferred to Pine Bush this year from Suffern. He score scored four goals and two assists. "He is an unselfish player who passes extremely well," said Pine Bush coach Al Tuthill.

Tuthill also praised Piazza. "He played a solid, consistent position at center fullback and played a big part in providing Pine Bush with its most successful season ever (3-7)."

Top Soccer Scorer in School's History

Speirs Setting C-G Records

HUDSON — John Speirs, a graduate of Saugerties High School, has left marks in the soccer record books at Columbia-Greene Community College that will likely endure for a long time.

In his sophomore season this year, Speirs bettered his own single-season scoring record, improved his position as the Twins' all-time leading goal scorer and emerged with a wide lead on C-GCC's total points list.

His freshman season was enough by itself to assure Speirs a place in the record books. Pat Lane of Cairo had scored 11 goals in the 1973 campaign, and Rich Dalton, in 1973-74, accumulated 14 goals to stand as C-GCC's career leader up to that point, but Speirs bettered both in one fell swoop. In 1975, his first ve with the Twins, Speirs drilled home 18 goals.

There were three less games on Columbia-Greene's schedule this year, but Speirs still managed to surpass his freshman production. He scored 20 goals this year to finish with 38 for his career a figure that nearly tripled Dalton's mark.

The Twins' captain this year, Speirs' point total, goals and assists, stands at 47 for his two seasons. This along with his other records will be difficult to top since the Northeastern Athletic Conference recently dropped some scheduling requirements, and Columbia-Greene will have approximately a 12 game schedule in future years.

During his standout career, Speirs recorded three hat tricks in 1975 and again in 1976. This season he also scored two goals in five separate games and had a total of five assists.

A Life Science major, Speirs operated at center forward for both his years. During that time he booted ten penalty kicks without a miss for C-GCC.

The 6-4, 180 pound sophomore plans a transfer to SUNY New Paltz where he hopes to continue his soccer career. He began the sport at Saugerties where he played three seasons of varsity ball under coach Tony Elia and led the Sawyers in scoring all three years.

Speirs also played basketball and baseball at Saugerties, and last year he became only the second athlete in C-GCC history to become a three-sport star. He averaged ten points per game on the Twins' 18-8 basketball team and played third base and shortstop for C-GCC's 8-9 baseball squad.

Golf Craftsman May Have Become Endangered Species

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — After spending 43 of his 69 years making golf clubs for a living, Burr Patchell feels he may have become an endangered species.

"The golf craftsman is just about gone," Patchell said in an interview in the pro shop he opened after retiring. "It's a lost art, the handmade golf club."

But if the old clubmaker is gone, he will not be forgotten if Patchell has anything to do with it. The back room of his pro shop contains a collection of more than 8,000 antique golf clubs he has collected in the past 48 years.

"The reason I'm collecting them is because they all are handmade and carry out someone's idea of how a club should be made," said Patchell, who was a caddy and professional before turning to club-making. He spent 30 years designing clubs for MacGregor Company.

His collection includes an 1810 leather-faced, spliced shaft driver with sheepskin grip; an 1840 putter with a ram's-horn inlay and a 1930 driver with ivory inlay and face.

But some of the clubs, like his "whistle shaft" 1-iron, have a special place in Patchell's collection.

The club was built at the turn of the century and was the predecessor to steel shaft clubs. It is made from a seamless steel pipe and has 286 holes in it to "get a little whip" in the swing.

Patchell said it took him 37 years to find the club, of which only 200 were made.

"When I was a young man I'd go through the country with a club like this setting up exhibits trying to get people to play golf," Patchell said.

His collection also includes other golf paraphernalia from the past, like a sand bucket which was used before the tee.

The bucket is actually two buckets, one suspended above the other. The top bucket held water which was used to wet the sand in the lower bucket. The golfer then took a handful of the wet sand and made a small mound to tee up his ball.

One wall of the room is lined with old putters in all shapes and sizes.

"The tour players come in here and they go nuts trying to buy these clubs, but I won't sell a one," said Patchell, pointing to the row of putters.

Included in the collection is the "Schenectady putter," which created a minor furor in the golf world in the 1920s.

"There was quite a lot of controversy about the shaft being near the center of the club and they wanted to outlaw it," Patchell said. "But they managed to keep it going and now they are almost all made like that."

"I really believe I have the world's largest collection of golf clubs. Most collectors buy and sell, but I don't sell. I just buy."

During his career as a clubmaker, Patchell helped Walter C-66Yn design the first sand wedge in 1927 and held 12 patents on club designs, mostly woods.

Reflecting on his career as a clubmaker, he admits golf equipment has come a long way, but adds, "the real workmanship just isn't there anymore."

United Way

If you think inflation is killing you imagine what it is doing to them.

Things are tough all over. Your dollars don't buy as much as they used to and that hurts, but have you stopped to think what inflation is doing to people too old to work, and people who have to live on limited incomes.

And what about the agencies that try to help these people.

Inflation is hurting United Way because we are in the business of providing services to help people. Perhaps inflation hurts us more because the problems are multiplied 1,000 times over in the lives of people who depend on us for help. A lot of people just can't make it today without a United Way.

Inflation now mean hanging on to the old dollar we won for another year or cutting back on something. Many of the people we serve have nothing left to cut back on. The people we serve are counting on us — we are counting on you. Give now when it really counts for those who need it the most. Give the United Way.

Nellie Brown, 83, Is Newest Swimming Champion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Twenty gold medals, 11 blue ribbons and 13 trophies is a pretty good haul for only 18 months of competitive swimming. It's even more so when you're 83 years old.

At an age when most of her contemporaries confine themselves to bingo games at retirement villages, Nellie Brown of Alexandria, Va., won all six events she entered in the AAU Masters Long Course Championships at St. Louis last month.

The achievement was little surprise to those who know her. For instance, the former first grade teacher rode her first camel at age 65 during a stopover in Egypt while on a round-the-world trip.

Mrs. Brown, the grandmother of five, competed in six events in St. Louis, setting a record for the 80-and-over age group with a 50-meter free style of 1:44.4. Now she's looking for new worlds to conquer.

Within a few weeks, she'll participate in her first synchronized swimming competition and is currently learning to front flip and backward somersault in the water.

"It's a whole new technique and I'm learning a lot," the jaunty octogenarian told an interviewer. "It's the first time I've ever had to have a coach."

A polio victim since early childhood, Mrs. Brown has been swimming since her college days at Mary Washington College but only for recreation and therapy. A year and a half ago, the coach of the D.C. Masters Swimming Team saw her in an Alexandria YMCA pool and urged her to test herself in competition.

In her first meet at Rockville, Md., as an 81-year-old, Mrs. Brown won five events and set two local records to acquire her first awards, a small gold-plated fish and a silver trophy.

"I don't care that much about medals," Nellie relates with a pleased smile. "I just want to keep going."

Even a broken back 10 years ago failed to curb her relish for swimming, except she can't use the butterfly or breaststrokes. But she does do the crawl and backstroke to compete in distances ranging from 50 to 500 meters.

"When I don't get to swim, I feel lost," the white-haired Virginian relates. "If I didn't swim, I'd be a cripple and I'm not going to give in to that."

Mrs. Brown had to retire as an Alexandria public school teacher at age 70, so she promptly took a job in a private school for another seven years. She's still teaching — working with mentally retarded and handicapped adults at the YMCA — and urging senior citizens to get into the swim.

"I tell them even if they can't swim, get into the pool and just push the water around," is her advice.

Recently, on a day she received a Sports Illustrated merit award from the mayor of Alexandria, a letter of congratulations arrived from Vice President-elect Walter Mondale and Mrs. Brown proudly reported she had also gotten a note of commendation from First Lady Betty Ford on her work with the mentally retarded.

The nation's best octo-genarian swimmer also confided that she has an invitation from President Ford to join him in the White House pool before he leaves office.

Because of a cold, she was prevented from her hour-a-day workout in the YMCA pool for a three-week period but Nellie departed the interview on this note: "I've got to get back in shape."

Lolich Denies Quit Talk

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Veteran pitcher Mickey Lolich says he isn't decided to leave baseball despite reports that he plans to break his contract with the New York Mets.

"When the time comes for retirement, I'll make the decision, not some sportswriter in New York," Lolich said Friday by telephone from his home near Grand Rapids, Mich.

A report from New York earlier in the day said the one-time Detroit Tigers ace had all but officially told the Mets he would not honor the second year of a two-year contract because he doesn't want to be separated from his family.

Lolich, 36, spent 13 major league seasons with Detroit. "I guess you could call it domestic," he said. "I grew up in a small city — Portland — close to the woods on the northwest side and Michigan is a lot like that. Living in New York with all those people is a new environment and I didn't enjoy my year."

He said New York "is all right for guys who want publicity and limelight. I don't need it. I've had success and I have had stardom, but basically I am an easy-going guy — not flamboyant, not a publicity seeker. New York didn't do anything for me. I was there a year and I didn't do any of those commercials or endorsements."

The Saga of Marvin Barnes Takes on Another Dimension

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The saga of Marvin Barnes, a topsy-turvy mix of basketball courts and courtrooms, soon takes on another dimension — prison.

Tall and talented, Barnes also had troubles in his rise from a local ghetto to All-America player status at Providence College and dreams of wealth.

Now, the $300,000 per year Detroit Pistons' forward is preparing for a one-year prison term in the Adult Correctional Institutions in Cranston, R.I., for violating state probation

Oct. 9.

A convicted felon since 1974, he was arrested at Detroit Metropolitan Airport when a security check turned up an unloaded handgun wrapped inside gym clothes in his luggage.

With good behavior, he could be paroled in four months and resume his basketball career. After Superior Court Judge Anthony A.

Giannini ordered him to prison by Dec. 14, Barnes' attorneys began searching for legal options to alter or delay his punishment.

"It's always a disappointment when you have to go to jail," Barnes said after the Tuesday ruling. "But I expected that much from the people here."

"I think if I was someone else this never would have happened. But, because of who I am... that's the price you pay for publicity," he said. "It's just like a basketball game. You win some, you lose some."

He claims state prosecutors and Providence police have treated him unfairly in scrapes with the law because of his fame and notoriety. The state maintains it handled him the same as it would any other person who comes before the courts accused of a crime.

"If it had been John Doe picked up in Detroit for the same offense and was on probation in Rhode Island, it probably wouldn't have come to the attention of the police," said Alton W. Wiley, Barnes' attorney, who is also black.

"He is being treated differently by the attorney general's office and the police department because of his notoriety," Wiley said. "I can't quarrel with what happened in court."

The probation violation stemmed from a conviction during his equally stormy college days.

Locally, his nickname was "Bad News" Barnes and Marvin went so far as putting "News-24" on his jacket and license plate, 24 being his basketball jersey number.

In 1974, while a senior, he pleaded guilty in Superior Court to assaulting former PC teammate Larry Ketvirtis with a tire iron after a scrimmage two years earlier.

The plea came midway into his second trial on the assault charge. A 1973 proceeding ended in a mistrial. Barnes maintained his innocence and said he pleaded guilty because he felt the judge and all-white jury were prejudiced and the state had enough evidence to convict him. He was also pressured by upcoming exams and negotiations for a lucrative pro basketball contract.

In November 1975, Ketvirtis won a $10,000 damage settlement from Barnes in two-week federal court trial stemming from the assault. He sought $1.5 million. Both sides claimed vindication by the award.

After that ordeal, Barnes vowed to "go play basketball, go on with my career and stay out of trouble."

The 6-foot-9 forward's current affiliation with the Pistons has proved as stormy as his two years with the Spirits of St. Louis in the twilight of the defunct American Basketball Association where he was rookie of the year in the 1974-75 season.

He was sidelined with a leg injury in October and the arrest came during a series of three suspensions for violating team rules and missing practices. He was on his way back to St. Louis with a girlfriend when the gun was found.

When Barnes began his career in St. Louis he adjusted lavishly to his new found income. He bought several expensive cars and eventually leased two apartments which he still has.

He began a pattern of no-shows and suspensions and hired and fired a number of player agents in his insecure quest for financial stability.

Ironically, it was Barnes' own testimony at the probation hearing which is sending him to prison.

When the defense presented its case, Barnes maintained steadfastly that the gun found in his gym bag belonged to and was placed there by a girlfriend. He said he bought it for her in San Antonio, Tex., in the summer of 1974 or 1975.

The prosecution later proved the gun was purchased in March 1976. Giannini indicated in his ruling that if no defense was presented when the state rested its case, he would have only found Barnes guilty of a technical violation and perhaps not sent him to jail. At that point, the evidence on gun ownership was unclear, he said.

But Barnes' inconsistency and evasiveness in lengthy testimony "impeached" him as a witness, the judge said, and led him to believe Barnes owned and possessed the handgun from the start.

"It is a law of this state that a law-abiding citizen cannot even possess a concealed weapon," Giannini said.

Life Supports Off, Dead in 13 Minutes

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Physicians, acting under a court order, shut off the respirator keeping 26-year-old Celia Cain breathing Saturday, and an attorney for the hospital announced she died 13 minutes later.

Mrs. Cain, the mother of two children, aged 9 and 4, had been declared clinically dead 14 days ago.

The court order directing that the life support system be cut off was issued by Circuit Court Judge John S. Cox at the request of the immediate members of Mrs. Cain's family.

The judge had decreed the devices were to be left off for 45 minutes, and at the end of that time if there were no sign of life, she was to be declared legally dead. If there were evidence of life, the system was to be restored.

The system was removed at 12:22 p.m. EST, and shortly thereafter officials at St. Vincent Medical Center announced that Mrs. Cain had died.

Mrs. Cain underwent a hysterectomy Nov. 20. She developed breathing complications following the operation and was hooked up to a respirator, which had kept her alive for 14 days.

At a preliminary hearing Friday medical specialists testified Mrs. Cain was medically dead, that her brain was partially dissolved and that blood was beginning to coagulate in her blood vessels.

Doctors said Mrs. Cain did not register any brain activity during four electro-encephalograms, and that she never again would have been able to breathe or maintain a heart beat on her own.

They refused at the time to turn off the mechanical respirator, however, saying Florida had no legal definition of death.

"We are pleased with the judge's decision," said husband Gerald Cain. "We believe Celia's been dead. Now we can pick up our lives and go on."

Mrs. Cain's case differs from that of Karen Anne Quinlan, the 22-year-old New Jersey woman removed from life support systems after months in a coma, in that Miss Quinlan shows evidence of brain activity, is breathing on her own and is still clinically alive.

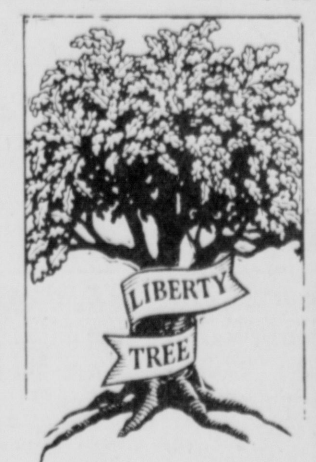

Judge Cox's order stated that Cain, the doctors and the hospital were to be held blameless in the action and will not be subject to either civil or criminal penalties.

Mrs. Cain's physician, Dr. James E. Glenn, informed Mrs. Cain's husband and other members of the family of her death. It was her husband who had obtained the court order requiring that the life support system be turned off.

None of the family was present in the hospital's intensive care ward when the respirator was shut down.

From Mock-up To Real Life

When Photographer Alan Carey Visited the Marbletown First Aid Unit last Sunday, the Group planned a series of Mock shots to show what their Work involved. Then Neil Hasset Left, got a sudden call for aid, And Carey rode along to the rescue Volunteers To The Rescue

Often mean difference between Life and death for residents
Of the 18 towns that have them

Before 1963, Marbletown residents who needed an ambulance fast called Moylan's Funeral Home in Rosendale. Undertakers use ambulances to transport bodies from hospitals to embalming parlors, and Moylan's offered the fastest emergency service outside Kingston—an extra, often critical, 20 minutes away.

Mr. Moylan, who conveyed heart attack victims, expectant mothers, and accident victims to Kingston hospitals, has since sold his ambulance—put out of the transport business by the Marbletown First Aid Unit, one of 18 such volunteer groups in the County.

But the memory of the pre-rescue squad days is still fresh in the minds of many Marbletown residents, including rescue volunteer Harriet Weber, founder of the Marbletown Unit:

"The undertaker was the only one around who owned an ambulance. It was a choice of either calling him or calling a commercial ambulance in Kingston, which took a long time to get here. Sometimes too long. Mr. Moylan was right over in Rosendale and he got here pretty quickly. We were lucky to have him, but the idea just never set right with some people."

If the stigma of having to go to the hospital via the funeral parlor had been the only problem with that form of transport, the undertaker might still be in the emergency aid business.

But First Aid was the main issue. Moylan, while suited for routine transport, didn't have the equipment or trained staff needed during an emergency.

Situations similar to the one in Marbletown existed in other Ulster County communities, including New Paltz, which formed a rescue squad in 1973 and Woodstock, where an emergency unit went into operation just last year. In those three communities alone, during 1975, over 1300 calls for emergency aid were logged. While no dollar amount can be placed on the service these units provide for Ulster County residents, a commercial ambulance charges about $60 for the Marbletown to Kingston run.

Given that information, Harriet Weber doesn't understand why people in her community haven't taken a more active role in their rescue squad.

"We've become the smallest unit in the county in terms of manpower. We started out on New Year's Day 1963 with 40 volunteers, and now we're down to 20 with another four in training. You know how it is... over the years people have moved away, other passed away and some just lost interest."

Considering that the unit is on call 24 hours a day, everyday, the workload is obviously a large one for such a small group. In addition to their rescue operations, the volunteers are also responsible for raising the $5,500 needed each year to keep the unit active. (This year the Marbletown Town Board voted to appropriate $1,500 a year for the squad.)

"On tag day our workers are out on the roads collecting money," says Weber. "At our annual fundraising dinner we do all the cooking and we serve the meal. We used to have an auxiliary that helped out with these things, but there again, people have lost interest."

By comparison, the Woodstock Rescue Squad, the county's newest unit, is in good shape. The problem of finding daytime volunteers, a situation that plagues most other units in the county, has been averted in Woodstock with the aid of Rotron employees who man the ambulance during business hours Monday through Friday.

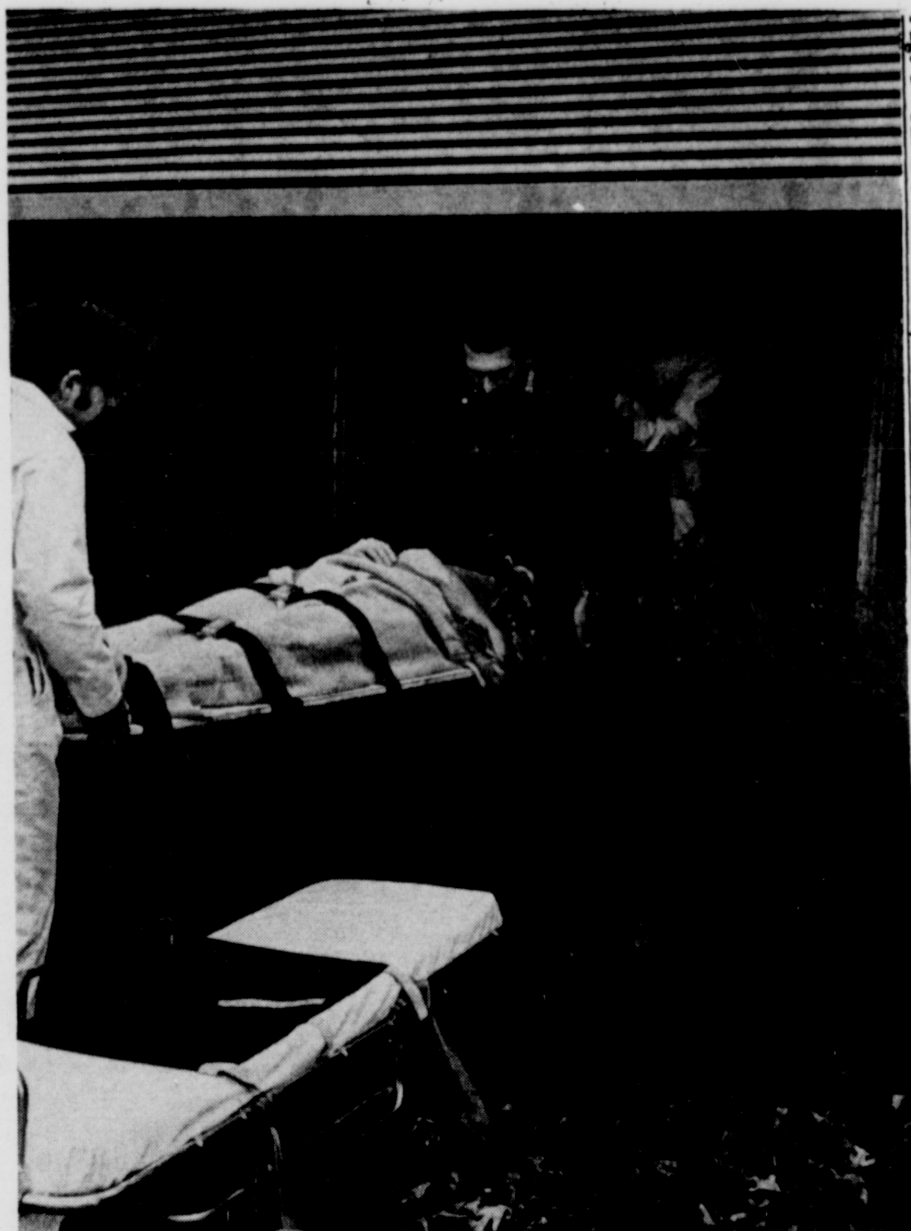

Another advantage of the Woodstock squad is their new equipment, including a defibrillator, which was donated as a result of one of their rescue operations.

Woodstock chapter president Judy Brown recently described the function of the machine:

"It's used to monitor heart rhythm and—if needed, to re-establish the heart function. Using it, we can arrive at the hospital with an EKG (Electrocardiogram), which is an enormous help to the doctors. In line with this we've installed an incoming phone line in Kingston Hospital's Intensive Care Unit and we can be in contact all the way in."

Perhaps because it's a new unit, Woodstock has had no problem in finding volunteers. At present, they operate with a staff of about 60 people. Like all other rescue workers in Ulster County, Woodstock volunteers are required to have attained at least advanced first aid training before they are allowed to participate in a rescue operation. Brown noted that in Woodstock, and in most other communities, volunteers have gone beyond the first aid training and acquired EMT (Emergency Medical Technician) certification.

"Wanting to help people is, of course, important," says Brown, "but it's not enough. You have to be willing to devote the necessary time and energy to do it right or you could do more harm than good to a victim. When we finish an operation we may be tired, but we find it's helpful to sit down and discuss what just happened. Next time can be any minute and you have to be ready."

Outside of Hardenburgh, which is too small to staff or afford a volunteer rescue squad, Rosendale is the only town in the county without a unit. Residents there use Don's Ambulance and Towing Service, at a cost of $58 per call.

Ghosts That Haunt Ulster County

Story by Gus Kramer

Stone Ridge's girl in
A white dress and the Phantom rider are favorites

One of Ulster County's favorite ghost stories concerns Stone Ridge's "Girl in the White Dress." In the early 1920's, two Kingston boys came home from college for a weekend. The first night home, bound for a dance out in the country and while driving along a deserted stretch of road, the boys came upon an attractive girl dressed in a white party gown. They slowed down and politely offered her a lift.

The girl smiled cordially and accepted. To their delight, she informed the boys that she, too, was going to the dance. They had a wonderful time. Jane — the name she gave them — proved to be a marvellous dancer, but between dances she hardly spoke, merely smiling gently in response to the boys' questioning. She also refused any of the light refreshments that were being dispensed.

When the dance ended, the boys offered to drive her home. Since the night was chilly, one of the lads draped his top coat around her shoulders.

The girl remained silent during most of the journey, but as they neared the deserted stretch of road where they had picked her up, she asked them to stop so she could get out. The boys, noticing a tumbled down shack nearby, reasoned that the girl was embarrassed and awkwardly said good night, thanking her for her pleasant, if rather reserved company.

Several miles down the road the young man remembered he hadn't gotten back his top coat. It was too late to return, so they decided to stop for the coat the next day, enroute back to school.

The next afternoon they experienced no difficulty in finding the weather-beaten shack. After a few sturdy knocks, they heard footsteps. The door slowly swung open and an old, old woman peered out at them with a questioning glance.

The boys nodded politely and asked for Jane. "There's no Jane here," she snapped. The two lads, suspecting something amiss, explained that they had been to the dance with Jane and merely wanted to top coat.

It was then one of the boys, gazing over the old woman's shoulder, saw a picture hanging on the wall. "That's her," he exclaimed. "That's the girl we took to the dance last night!"

The old woman looked at them sorrowfully. "Yes, that's Jane all right. But you weren't to any dance with her. She was killed in a car crash five years ago yesterday. In fact, she was on her way to a dance when the accident occurred." The boys refused to believe the story and again demanded the top coat.

The woman just shook her head. "If you don't believe me," she said, "just cross the road and walk over to that little cemetery. You'll see her grave."

The boys had no trouble finding the grave. The top coat was draped over the headstone.

We'll call this one "The Catskill Horseman." The legend concerns a phantom figure riding a white stallion down a Catskill road. Attached to the saddle is a rope tied to a girl in a blue dress, who screams as her body is dragged over the road. This apparition is said to be seen once a year on the anniversary date of the original occurrence.

Here's the true story, which dates back to the pre-Revolutionary War days of indentured servants. Servants in those days were compelled to work a certain length of time until a debt— often the cost of their ship passage to America— had been fulfilled. They were actually slaves.

There then lived near Catskill a wealthy man named William Salisbury, who had a mean reputation for driving his servants hard. A recent young German immigrant, Anna Schwartz, was indentured into Salisbury's service. The girl, frightened and alone in a strange land, became very homesick until two other German families moved into nearby homes.

After completing her day's labors, young Anna would sneak out of the house late at night to visit the two families. Her spirits perked up as she was once again able to converse with someone in her native tongue. In some way Salisbury found out about these nocturnal visits and, vindictive man that he was, forbade Anna to continue them.

For a few weeks Anna obeyed. Then, one night when Salisbury was supposed to have left Catskill on a few days journey to New York, she slipped away for another forbidden visit with her countrymen. Salisbury, however, had to cancel his trip and returned to his farm to find Anna away.

Livid with rage, he ordered a servant to saddle his white stallion and told another to fetch him a 25-foot length of rope. Without knocking, he marched into the neighboring German's house and dragged the frightened Anna into the yard. He then tied one end of the rope to his saddle and knotted the other end around Anna's waist.

Salisbury later swore he only meant to frighten Anna by pulling her a few yards, but the stallion bolted, dragging the screaming, bleeding girl down the rocky road to her death. Salisbury was convicted and sentenced to wear a cord around his neck for 60 years, or until he was 99, at which time he was to be hung!

Salisbury's friends deserted him and he lost all his property. The cord remained around his neck for 60 years, until he was 99, but instead of being hung, he was granted a pardon and the cord removed. Three years later he died.

Decoupage Gifts

The word decoupage (DAY-koo-pazh) rhymes with "garage." It is from a French word meaning "cutting."

There are three steps to decoupage crafts:

1. CUT your designs out of magazines, newspapers or old books. You can paint or draw your own designs, using water colors or crayons. You can also buy stick-on decals at many craft stores.
2. GLUE your designs on almost anything: glass, rock, plastic, wood, metal, cardboard or heavy paper.
3. BRUSH on a coat of decoupage finish, a liquid sold at craft stores. Let it dry between coats. For a smooth, protected finish, paint on several coats.

You can also decoupage wood or cardboard boxes. Rocks are fun!

Lots of Pots and Vases

Clay pot: Paint a pot with enamel paint. Glue on your designs. You can also cover the pot with scrap materials.

Cup, mug or glass: These make good planters. Paint them with enamel paint or leave plain and glue on your designs.

Put rocks in the bottom for drainage.

Coffee can: Paint a coffee can with enamel paint and paste on your design.

Plastic container: Wash and dry thoroughly. Ask an adult to cut off the tops, if necessary.

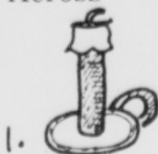

Decorate a shallow margarine bowl. Put pebbles in the bottom. Plant narcissus bulbs sold at seed stores. Water. Put them in a closet for 10 days until they sprout. Bring out into the sunlight for Christmas giving.

Happy Birthday Dear Seals!

On December 9, Christmas Seals will have a birthday. These are the brightly colored stamps used on cards and gifts.

On this day in 1907, the first seals went on sale in this country.

The money raised was used to build a children's tuberculosis hospital.

Miss Emily Bissell of Delaware worked hard to get the seal sale started in this country.

Today, the money raised is used to help fight air pollution and lung diseases.

The Colonial Times

In early Colonial times, the serious Puritans in New England outlawed the celebration of Christmas because the holiday had become too gay and festive. When more and more people moved to this country from other lands, this law was changed.

Christmas in Colonial Virginia 200 years ago was a very happy time. The Christmas season lasted from Christmas Eve through the 12th night (January 6). This was a time for parties and fox hunts. Children received gifts on New Year's Day.

Gifts to Make and Do!

For the Tennis Set!

Does your Mom or Dad like to play tennis? Decorate a tennis ball can for them. Paint it with enamel paint. Using different colored enamels, decorate it with a tennis message and designs. Suggestions: All set for tennis. Happiness is tennis. My Mom loves me and tennis!

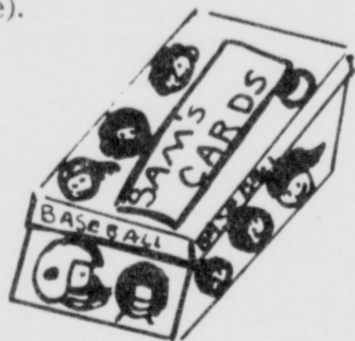

The satin stitch is easy to learn.

Decorate a tennis towel. A small white hand towel is the right size. Plan and draw on your design. Use embroidery floss (a yarn that is washable).

For Sports Fans

Using the decoupage idea, decorate a shoe box for a fan to keep his football, basketball and baseball cards in. Cut the pictures out of sports magazines.

Decorate a Tissue Box

Spread newspapers on the floor. Glue on uncooked shell, bow tie or elbow macaroni. Let it dry. Spray with silver or gold spray paint.

Calico Wreath

Cut small circles of material the same size. Put a cotton ball or scrap of old stocking in the center. Sew up the ball, tucking edges inside. Use a thick thread to sew the balls together in a circle. Add a ribbon bow.

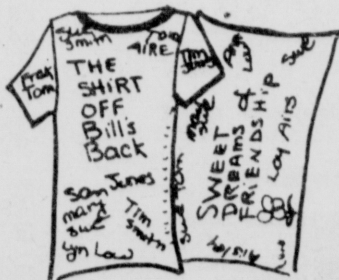

Calico Ball

Cut a circle of material. Stuff it with pieces of an old stocking, material or cover a foam ball. Tie it together at the top. Use a pipe cleaner as a hanger.

Very Personal Gifts

Give your best friend an inexpensive white T-shirt and a liquid embroidery pen. (You can get this pen at many hobby shops. Designs made with this pen are washable.) Your friend can have all his friends sign it. You can do this with a pillow case, too!

- 2 cans (6 oz. each) pink lemonade concentrate, thawed

For Parents' n Teachers

This section of The Mini Page is especially designed for parents and teachers to use as a guide to this week's Mini Page.

This Mini Page has a poster format. The special craft and cooking features are on pages 1 and 4. By opening your Mini Page, it becomes a Mini Poster.

Page 1: Some decoupage finishes can be purchased relatively cheaply. You can give the class project from 1 to 3 coats. Children can bring in their pots, cups, cans, etc. If you wish to skip the decoupage process, you can use the cut and glue idea and spray the design with a clear acrylic finish.

Here is a recipe for baker's clay that you can use to make Christmas decorations at home or at school: 2 cups flour, 1 cup salt, enough water to make a dough-like mixture. Use cookie cutters to make decorations. These should be baked at 300° for 1 hour (longer for thicker objects). Objects that are thick should have a wire pushed in at several places to avoid air pockets. A paper clip pressed into the back of each object before baking will serve as a hanger. Designs can be painted or sprayed with a clear acrylic finish.

A Volunteer Talks About Rescue Work

Ed Dillon, a native of the New Paltz area and a student at Ulster County Community College, joined the New Paltz Rescue Squad in August 1975 as a prelude to police work.

"I've always had some interest in medicine, but my main interest is policework," he said in a recent interview. "That's what I plan to pursue as a career, and I felt this experience would be useful. It has been. You learn a lot about having to make spontaneous decisions, and you get experience in directing people at the scene of an accident. You learn about making decisions regarding the safety of people at the scene of an accident."

Dillon said certain conflicts arise, some of them with police agencies, which need to be resolved: "Not to single anybody out, but the State Police, to give you an example, don't want you to clutter up the road for 15 minutes. They want you to get the victim on a stretcher and off to the hospital."

"They have a point, but there is another, more essential point: Stabilization before transport. It's important to try to evaluate the extent of an injury before you move a victim. Somebody could have an injured spine, and a wrong move by the rescue squad could paralyze that person for life."

"That brings me to another point," he continued. "I think police departments should make it mandatory for all their members to have Advanced First Aid training. It's in line with their duty to protect life and property. You can't always expect that somebody with First Aid training will come by in a passing car and stop to help. Besides, most people see the police at the scene and figure that they know exactly what to do, which isn't always the case."

"Since the police are usually the first people on the scene, they should know something about what to do for a victim. This is particularly true in rural areas where it might take longer for an ambulance to arrive. The action of the police could be the difference between life and death for a lot of people. Even something basic — like opening an airway. It's an elementary first-aid measure, but believe me, it's important."

Asked if he knew why others had volunteered for squad duty, Dillon said: "I suppose if you spoke with fifty people you'd get fifty reasons, but one thing seems to be consistent, we all want to help out. It's a great feeling."

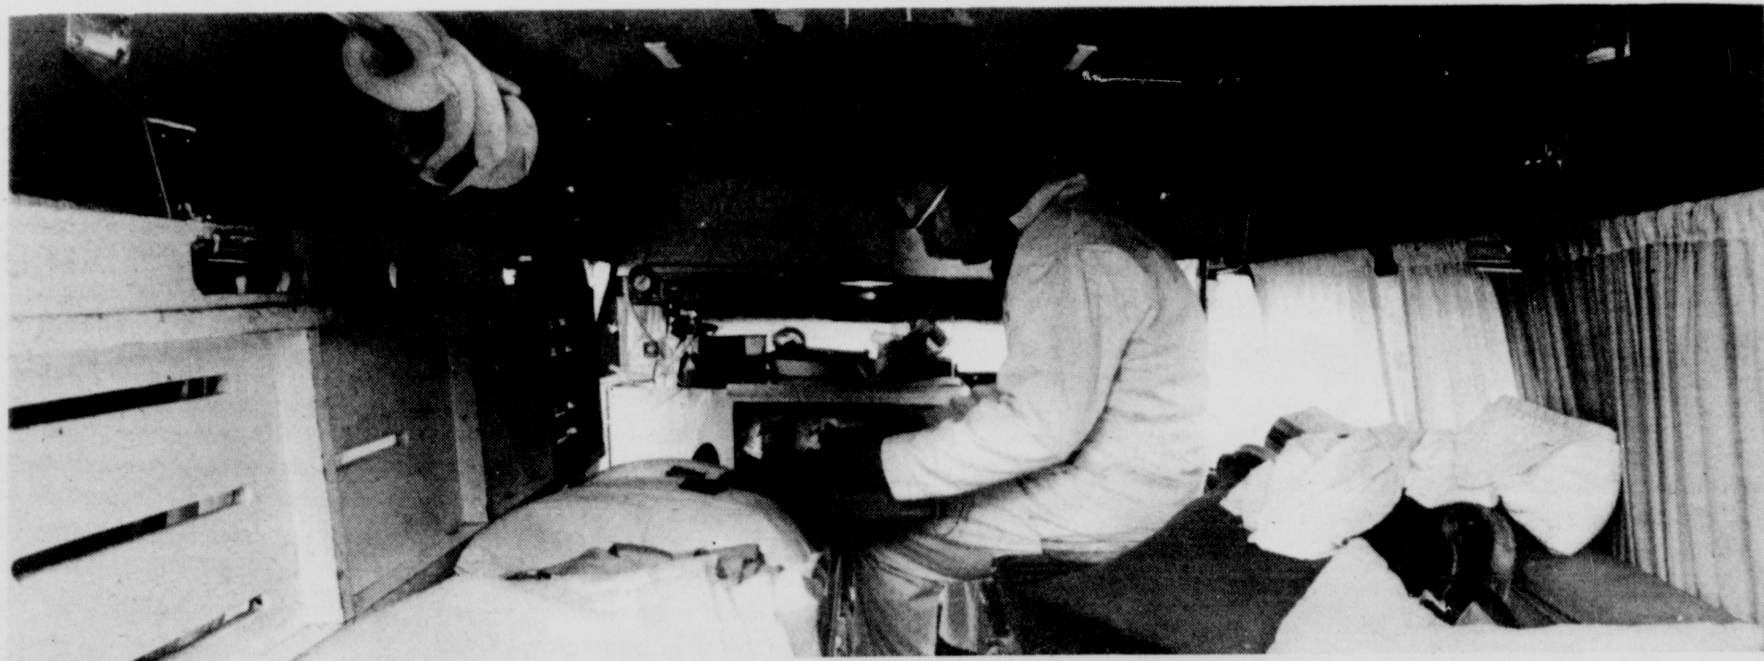

The mail the New Paltz squad has gotten underscores the need for such service. "We get many thank-you notes from the people we've helped or their families, some with contributions. One letter was from California, somebody passing through who had an accident and wrote to thank us. That's really what this unit is all about."

Chef 's Corner

"If I didn't cook, I don't know what I'd do," says Art Roem as he settles back to enjoy one of his own creations. The middle aged, mild-tempered chef has been cooking since he was a 14-year-old in Rotterdam — obviously loving every minute of it.

He's been overseeing food preparation at 11 Main in Kingston for the past two years. Before that he was the chef at the Rathskeller, across the street, the St. Regis Hotel in New York, and he travelled for a number of years in the kitchens of the Holland-America steamship lines.

Although his menus range from fine French creations to German schnitzels, Roem says his favorite cookery is Indonesian fare — an ephemeral blend of Chinese, East Indian and Dutch influences that can be adapted to suit any taste or pocketbook.

Roem started his cooking career in a Dutch pastry shop, worked through the bakery to the butcher shop and from there to the Dutch ocean liners, where everything and anything was expected to be served up to passengers.

He puts together the two Indonesian offerings on 11 Main's menu with a fast-moving flare and continual light conversation which make watching his preparation almost as much fun as sampling his finished product.

"You have to have a natural talent for cooking," he comments, tossing fried vegetables into the air with a flip of his long handled, cast-iron pan.

On the other burner he stirs up a noodle mixture. In the deep fryer, bananas are crisping.

"This kind of cooking lets you use your own imagination, and whatever you have in the kitchen— leftover pork chop, a little bit of chicken, some fish — throw it all in. You can use fresh vegetables or those frozen, stir-fry kind on the market now, or leftovers, whatever is there...that's the beauty of goreng."

Roem explains that the word goreng simply means "fried" Nasi is the Indonesian word for rice — nasi goreng, fried rice, with any available additions of meat and vegetables.

Bami, literally translated, means "ba"(pork), "mi"(noodles)—fried pork and noodles.

Indonesians do not eat pork themselves, because it's against their religious beliefs, he explains. The Chinese, from whom the recipe was originally taken, do use a lot of pork — and the Dutch, who colonized the islands in later years, also eat pork — "On the islands they use a great deal of chicken and fish," he says "but anything will do."

"A nice cold beer goes well with these dishes" says Roem, taking a break from his afternoon duties to relax and sample his goreng with a chilled glass of imported brew.

"Good,health" he toasts with a characteristic smile.

"Enjoy."

Chazy Dowaliby

Basic Vegetable Mixture

Two large onions (3 cups), chopped

Half a bunch of celery chopped and blanched (dunked briefly in boiling water)

One or two garlic cloves(to taste)

One green pepper, diced

One large leek or half a bunch of scallions, chopped

Cooking oil

Saute onion and garlic in oil until golden, add pepper and leeks. Blanch celery and add to mixture. Season with salt and curry or ginger, depending on the recipe being followed. This mixture can be made ahead, and in fact is better if the ingredients are allowed to blend and take on each others flavors.

Nasi Goreng (fried rice)

Vegetable Mixture

Curry powder

Three cups steamed rice

Two cups diced cooked meat (pork, chicken or beef)

A few tablespoons of melted butter

Toss the rice and chopped meat into the heated vegetable mixture and stir fry until ingredients seem well blended. Soy sauce may be added is you like, Keep the mixture warm while you prepare the garnishes.

Art Roem

Garnish for Nasi Goreng

3 Ripe banana

Egg, bread crumb and flour for breading

Cooked shrimp

Sardines

Fried eggs(T1 per person)

Slice bananas in half, cross-wise, so they stay whole. Flour, egg, crumb and deep fry until golden brown. Saute shrimp, and sardines in a bit of oil. Fry eggs sunny side up. Any or all of the garnishes can be served, depending on taste and budget. Serve the dish with chutney— if you can find a jar — crushed cayenne peppers, or cayenne or other hot peppers or pepper sauce and let guests mix sweet hot and salty soy sauce to their liking.

Bami Goreng

Ginger

Four cups shredded cabbage

Half a cucumber, peeled and diced

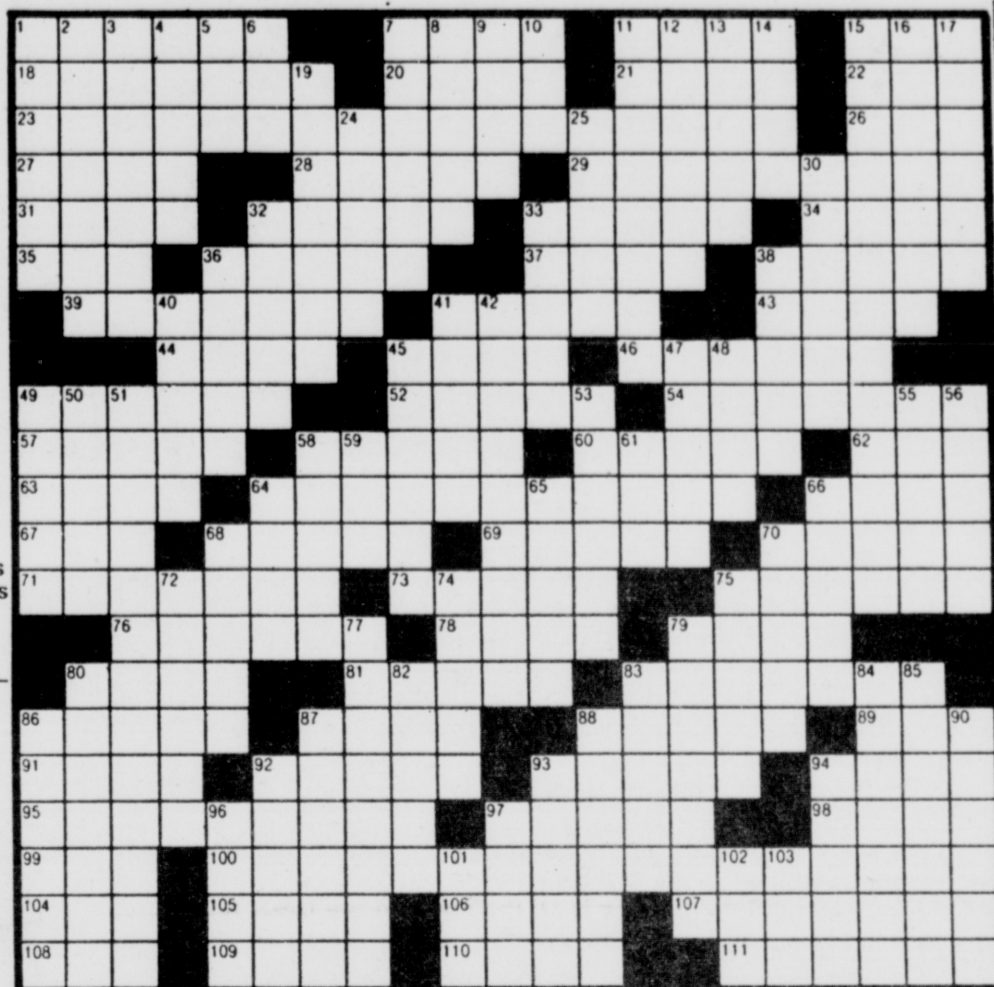

Three cups wheat flour noodles (not egg noodles)

Vegetable mixture.

Two cups cooked meat

Stir fry cabbage in oil until limp. Add meat, vegetable mixture and diced cucumber and mix well. Add cooked noodles; they can be found in oriental food stores or special sections of supermarkets, or you can use an italian macaroni product like linguini, that is made from wheat flour and water. Noodles should be flat and long. Add ginger, soy sauce or salt. Heat through and keep warm while preparing garnishes: Fried bananas and a thin omelet, cut into long strips. Arrange the bananas around the side of the platter and top the bami with strips of egg omelet. Serve with chutney, peppers and soy sauce, as with Nasi Goreng. Either of these dishes can be made with leftover meat or fish in any combination, as well as vegetables of your own choice.

Lovers and Tyrants, by Francine du Plessix Gray.

(Simon and Schuster, $8.95)

This partially autobiographic first novel is the story of a woman's quest for love with no strings attached. Lovers, Stephanie has learned through years of bittersweet experience, are generally tyrants. First there was her Russian nurse, then her French aristocrat father, later a princely lover, finally a Yankee husband.

In her 40s and ailing, she flees the tedium of her prosaic marriage to ramble the Western deserts with a homosexual youth who in his turn is imperious, possessive, garrulous and a sexual dud. Does he attract her because of a suppressed androgynous longing? Or is he Nihil, the angel of death?

At book's end Stephanie is in Las Vegas feeling she has exorcized "one hell of a bunch of oppressors" and the reader is apt to be at wit's end.

There is much in this book of value. Mrs. Gray is a gifted and experienced writer (two nonfiction works, many magazine articles) who can delineate relationships in a most sensitive manner, in the language of irony.

The opening chapters devoted to Stephanie's lonely childhood in Paris and her introduction to American competitiveness in school in New York during World War II are about the most readable — and funny — literature published this year. The account of Stephanie's visit to her French relatives in the family manor also is something to treasure.

With Stephanie's marriage, Mrs. Grey's story loses some of its surprises, becomes repetitive and, in the end, boring. Having grown up with Stephanie, we have too much respect for her to understand her demeaning relationship with gay Elijah, a gigolo who barely pays his way with boyish charm.

"Lovers and Tyrants" is one of the last best sellers of 1976 and with it Francine du Plessix Gray has arrived in the front rank of American fiction writers.

'The Song': 'Best Rock Musical Ever'

By BRUCE MEYER
(UPI)

The relationship between America's two leading popular entertainment forms — movies and rock 'n' roll — has always been a bit strained.

Ever since "Rock Around the Clock" became a punks' anthem in "The Blackboard Jungle," moviemakers have been fascinated with the idea of capturing rock's emotional intensity. With very few exceptions, they have failed.

It apparently takes a delicate balance of pictures and sound to make sledgehammer music come across the way it should.

Even the more successful film presentations of rock — notably the mid-60s' "T.A.M.I. Show," and two festival movies, "Monterey Pop" and "Woodstock" — dealt at least as much with multi-group "events" as with the music itself.

In the one-group films, including the Rolling Stones' "Gimme Shelter" and "Ladies and Gentlemen..." and the Beatles' "Let It Be," the music tended to be restricted by the stage format, while storytelling flicks like "Tommy" pushed the music into a backdrop role. All of them were dissatisfying for anyone who appreciates the power of live-and-in-person rock.

Prepare yourself, then, for a treat. Because the world's most popular hard rock band has come up with the best rock movie ever made.

Led Zeppelin's "The Song Remains The Same" puts it all on the screen — and does so by leaving the restrictiveness of the stage behind for wider and stranger horizons.

"The Song" is essentially the record of a Led Zep concert at Madison Square Garden a couple of years ago. All the usual concert-movie scenes — the black limousines and the ecstatic crowds and lead singer Robert Plant's on-stage prancing and guitarist Jimmy Page's flying fingers — are there, including some fine close-up camera work and brilliant playing, especially by Page.
